I. GENERAL INFORMATION ABOUT THE STATE OF SRI LANKA

A. History, geography, demography, economy, government, social infrastructure, post-tsunami reconstruction

1. History

1. Recent investigations show that around c. 30000 B.C. the earliest inhabitants of Sri Lanka were the Mesolithic prehistoric people. They were Stone Age communities and were hunter-gatherers. The Early Iron Age communities arrived from India and introduced the use of metal, ceramics, paddy cultivation and rudimentary irrigation around 1000 B.C.

2. During the reign of King Devanampiya Tissa, Buddhism was introduced in 247 B.C. by Arahata Mahinda, the son of Emperor Asoka of India. This is a significant event, which influenced the country's political and socio-cultural evolution as well as its agricultural economy. Of the early settlements, Anuradhapura grew into a powerful kingdom engaged in foreign trade and diplomacy.

3. The Middle historic period is marked by remarkable architectural and hydraulic achievements. This period also witnessed the development of the island as the primary entrepôt for international trade in the Indian Ocean rim and its connections to the Mediterranean and the Far East. From the post 9th century AD, Sri Lanka experienced a number of invasions from neighbouring nations and the capital was moved constantly to different locations.

4. In the modern period, the Portuguese arrived in 1505, when the capital was established at Kotte, in the western lowlands. The Portuguese arrived to trade in spices and were displaced by the Dutch. The Dutch rule lasted from 1656 to 1796, and they were displaced in turn by the British. During this period the highland Kingdom, with its capital in Kandy, retained its independence despite repeated assaults by colonial powers who ruled parts of the country. In 1815 the Kingdom of Kandy was annexed by the British who established their rule over the whole island. Modern communications, Western medical services, education in English, as well as the plantation industry (coffee followed by tea, rubber and coconut) developed during British rule. By a process of peaceful, constitutional evolution, Sri Lanka regained its independence in 1948 and is now a sovereign republic, with membership in the Commonwealth of Nations and the United Nations Organization.

2. Geographical features

5. Sri Lanka, an island in the Indian Ocean is located to the south of the Indian subcontinent. It lies between 5° 55' and 9° 55' north of the Equator and between the eastern longitudes 79° 42' and 81° 52'. The total land area is 65,610 sq. km. and is astonishingly varied. A length of 445 km. and breadth of 225 km. encompasses tropical beaches, rainforests, grass plains and other mini eco-systems. The relief features of the island consist of a mountainous mass somewhat south of the centre, rising to heights exceeding 2,500 metres, surrounded by broad plains. Palm fringed beaches surround the island and the sea temperature rarely falls below 27°C.

3. Demography

6. Sri Lanka has a population of 19.8 million of whom the majority are Sinhalese (74 per cent). Other ethnic groups are made up of Sri Lankan Tamils (12.6 per cent), Indian Tamils (5.5 per cent), Moors, Malays, Burghers (of Portuguese and Dutch descent) and others (7.9 per cent). Sri Lanka is a multi-religious country; Buddhists constitute 69.3 per cent, Hindus 15.5 per cent, Christians 7.6 per cent and Muslims 7.5 per cent (source: Central Bank, Country Profile 2006).

4. Economy

7. Sri Lanka's economy is expected to have grown by 6.7 per cent in 2007. With this performance, economic growth has been above 6 per cent in three consecutive years for the first time. As a result, the gross domestic product (GDP) per capita, which was US dollars 979 in 2003, has increased by 65 per cent since then to reach US dollars 1,615 in 2007. Along with this growth performance, unemployment declined to the hitherto lowest level of 5.6 per cent in the third quarter of 2007. Though the growth in 2007 was slower than the growth of 7.7 per cent recorded in 2006, the high growth in 2007 indicates the continuing resilience of the economy; its ability to grow amidst a number of challenges. The major challenges were the high international oil prices, the adverse weather conditions experienced in the first half of the year, intense competition for apparel exports in the major destinations and the unsettled security situation in the country.

8. The growth was reasonably broad based across the three major sectors viz. Agriculture, Industry and Services. As per the sectoral composition of the economy, the services sector accounted for 60 per cent of the GDP while the industrial and agricultural sectors accounted for 28 per cent and 12 per cent, respectively. The services sector is estimated to have made a significant contribution to the overall growth. Among the subsectors, post and telecommunications; cargo handling, ports and civil aviation; and banking, insurance, real estate and other financial services performed well in 2007. However, the hotels and restaurants subsector suffered due to lower tourist arrivals in 2007.

9. The agriculture sector grew moderately by 3.2 per cent, mainly due to weather setbacks impacting on tea and paddy cultivation. Performance in the rubber, coconut, minor export crops and livestock sectors were on par with expectations. The complete recovery in the fisheries sector to the pre-tsunami level contributed largely to the growth of the agriculture sector.

10. The industrial sector recorded a healthy growth of 7.4 per cent in 2007, benefiting from both external and domestic demand. All major sub sectors, namely, mining and quarrying; manufacturing; electricity, gas and water and construction, contributed positively to this growth. The manufacturing subsector, which is the largest sub sector of the industrial sector, contributed more than 60 per cent of the total industrial output. This sector mainly benefited from the apparel industry. Special concessions available under the European Union Generalised System of Preferences (EU-GSP+) scheme supported the commendable growth in the apparel sector in 2007.

11. To contain inflationary pressures on prices from excess demand, a relatively tight monetary policy was implemented in 2007. Consequent to the increases in policy rates by 300 basis points during the period 2004-2006, the Central Bank raised its policy interest rates by a further 50 basis points in February 2007. Further, the Central Bank continued to conduct aggressive open market operations on both overnight and permanent basis to maintain market liquidity at a level consistent with the reserve money targets. The Central Bank was able to achieve tight quarterly reserve money targets during 2007, containing the demand driven component of inflation. However, inflation that was on a downward trend during the first half of 2007, increased thereafter due to several factors, including the prices of oil and other commodities, which reached historically high levels and led to a substantial upward adjustment in prices of many domestic goods and services. The adjustment of domestic commodity prices such as that of oil to reflect market prices also adversely impacted on inflation, but considering the resultant price pass-through adjustments, they were considered the appropriate policy actions, on medium and long term bases.

12. The external sector displayed an impressive performance in 2007. Exports grew by 12.5 per cent in 2007 mainly supported by enhanced trading opportunities derived through trading agreements, improvements in the quality of exports and initiatives taken by the government and major exporters a few years ago. Persistently strong demand for apparel and tea had provided a basis for the strong trade performance in 2007. Tea exports crossed the US dollars 1.0 billion mark for the first time in 2007. Concessions received by way of the EU-GSP+ scheme helped diversify markets and exported products as well as to expand backward integration in the apparel industry. Meanwhile, imports grew by 10.2 per cent, mainly reflecting the higher expenditure on oil and investment goods. The increased spending on investment goods was underpinned by the accelerated development projects launched by the government and projects undertaken by the private sector especially in the construction, telecommunication and information technology sectors. The trade deficit was US dollars 3,560 million in 2007. The sharp rise in worker remittances, which increased by 15.8 per cent to US $ 2,501 million, helped contain the current account deficit in 2007.

13. During the year, a remarkable increase was also seen in the foreign inflows to the government and foreign direct investment. This was mainly due to the government raising US dollars 500 million from its debut international bond issue and allowing investment by foreigners in Treasury bonds up to a sum of 10 per cent of the outstanding Treasury Bond stock. Increased inflows to the capital and financial accounts helped record a projected surplus in the overall Balance of Payments of around US dollars 550 million, in 2007. It may be noted that the successful completion of Sri Lanka's debut international bond issue was a remarkable achievement as this bond was issued in the midst of several political and economic challenges. The country's external reserves increased to US dollars 3,062 million in 2007.

14. The fiscal strategy of the Government continued to be in the direction enunciated in the "Mahinda Chintana" policy document, which was the forerunner to the "Ten-year Vision" framework of the Government. The gradual reduction of the overall budget deficit to a sustainable level is the centrepiece of the fiscal policy framework. The government debt to GDP ratio continued to decline to 86 per cent by end 2007. The revenue to GDP ratio has continued in its favourable trend for the third consecutive year in 2007, thereby confirming the success of the strenuous efforts made by the Government. Strengthening tax administration further, streamlining tax incentives and exemptions, enhancing tax compliance and strengthening enforcement would be among the major policy actions that need to be pursued with commitment over the next few years as well.

15. In 2007, the Central Bank took several measures to strengthen and improve the efficiency of the financial sector, improve risk management and enhance access to finance. With these initiatives, the outlook for financial system stability remains favourable, as the capacity of the financial system to withstand and manage risks at the institutional and infrastructure level is being continuously strengthened (Source: Central Bank).

5. Government

16. Before the colonial period, Sri Lanka was a monarchy. Thereafter administrative and governmental reforms were introduced under the Portuguese, Dutch and British rulers. According to the recommendations of the Colebrook-Cameron Commission, the Executive Council and the Legislative Council- the first legislative bodies of colonial Ceylon - were set up by the Governor, Sir Robert Horton, in 1833. Universal Franchise was granted in 1931.

17. Sri Lanka regained its independence from the British in 1948. A Westminster system of parliamentary governance was then installed under the Soulbury Constitution of 1948. In 1972, a Republican Constitution was adopted with a single legislative body, the National State Assembly, the executive power being vested in the Prime Minister and a President as the Constitutional Head of State. Following the enactment of a new Constitution of the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka in 1978, an Executive Presidential form of Government was introduced. The President is both Chief Executive as well as Head of State, and is elected directly in a national vote for a 6-year term of office.

18. The supreme national legislative body is the Parliament. It consists of 225 members. Sri Lanka enjoys a multiparty system and representatives of many political parties are in the present Parliament representing varying political philosophies, approaches as well as different communities and religions.

19. The 1978 Constitution introduced a radical departure to the previously existing electoral system and electoral districts. The previous system was based on constituencies with individual candidates nominated by recognized political parties or independent candidates. The candidate obtaining the highest number of votes in respect of the constituency was declared elected. This system, commonly described as the first-past-the-post (FPTP) system, was changed in 1978 into a system of proportional representation.

20. Sri Lanka is divided into nine provinces to be administered by a Governor, appointed by the President and a Chief Minister and Board of Ministers, who are elected.

21. The people of Sri Lanka have succeeded in maintaining strong democratic traditions with regular elections since independence. Voter participation at elections is generally high and at the last general election in 2005 it was 75 per cent.

22. The overall authority for the conduct of the elections is vested in the Commissioner General of Elections which is an independent office under the Parliamentary Elections Act as amended. The 17th Amendment to the Constitution introduced a set of new provisions to the Constitution described as Chapter XIV A. Article 103, paragraph 1, of this chapter provides that there shall be an Election Commission consisting of five members appointed by the President on the recommendation of the Constitutional Council. The President is also empowered to nominate one such member as the Chairman of the Commission, also on the recommendation of the Constitutional Council. The Commissioner General of Elections continues to exercise the powers and functions vested in the Election Commission in terms of an interim provision contained in section 27 (2) of the 17th Amendment to the Constitution.

23. The conduct of the election in respect of each electoral district is entrusted to a person designated as the "Returning Officer" who, in turn appoints a Presiding Officer to be in charge of each polling station within his electoral district.

24. The counting of votes and the declaration of results at general elections is contained in Part IV of the Parliamentary Elections Act. A Returning Officer of the district is in charge of the count within such a district and is empowered to appoint a counting officer to be in charge of each counting centre (section 49). The Returning Officer declares the result in terms of section 60 of the Act.

25. Sri Lanka has the practice of inviting foreign election observers to ensure free and fair elections.

6. Social infrastructure

26. Sri Lanka's achievements in the area of social infrastructure are well recognized. Sri Lanka's education and health indicators such as high literacy, maternal and infant mortality rates and life expectancy have shown a steady improvement over the years and have reached levels comparable even to high-income countries. The intervention of successive governments since independence to maintain universal access to free health care and education and to implement comprehensive social welfare safety net programmes have provided the foundation to realize these achievements. Programmes such as Janasaviya, Food Stamps and the present Samurdhi Scheme were not conceived purely as measures of social welfare; however in their totality, they have helped citizens of the country to realize their full potential consistent with the enjoyment of fundamental rights, including political and civil rights, economic, social and cultural rights, as well as the right to development. State policies have also helped to reduce income disparities among different socio-economic groups in the country. The Human Development Report 2006 of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) places Sri Lanka at 93 on the human development index (HDI) significantly above other States in the South Asian region.

27. It is a little known fact that throughout the years of conflict, humanitarian and developmental needs of the civilian population of the North and the East, including in conflict areas, were continuously met by the Government of Sri Lanka together with some assistance from the donor community. The administrative machinery including the free national health, education and infrastructure facilities in conflict areas are continuing to be maintained by the Government despite the fact that the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) siphons off such funding for its own illegal purposes.

Education

28. The education system of Sri Lanka is renowned for having achieved near universal primary education and high levels of literacy. Successive Governments since independence have maintained high levels of expenditure on education, averaging about 5 per cent of GNP or more than 15 per cent of total government expenditure. This has resulted in adult literacy rising from 58 per cent in 1946 to 78 per cent in 1971, to 86 per cent in 1984 and to 89.3 per cent in 1992. The literacy rate for 2003/04 was 92.5 per cent comparable for males and females alike.

29. An important outcome of provision of free education is that for the first time, the large masses of people in the rural areas had access to education. After 1960, most of the entrants to the universities were from schools in the rural areas. As a result, people from the rural areas and the underprivileged have had greater access to jobs, thereby contributing to greater social equity as well as a more equitable distribution of income as a wider segment of the population gained access to employment and higher incomes.

30. Quantifying the benefits of the free education system is a complex process. However, there is little doubt that the broad-basing of literacy and civic awareness through free education is a prerequisite for enhancing the quality of life of the population and promoting democratic governance and public accountability. Free education has also contributed substantially to the other achievements of Sri Lanka in health, including fertility reduction and gender empowerment, which in turn has led to increasing productivity in various sectors of the economy.

31. The development of the education system to explore new frontiers of knowledge and match it with dynamic needs of the labour market is vital to achieve sustainable high economic growth and development. Key issues in the education system related to equity, quality, efficiency and effectiveness, are incorporated in the Ten-year Vision framework which plans to transform the education system into one that will promote both knowledge and technological skills required for rapid economic growth and development, as well as promoting values, and attitudes needed for building social peace and harmony.

Health care

32. The national health policy of Sri Lanka from the early 1950s has been governed by a commitment to provide comprehensive and free health care to the entire population. This policy has applied to both preventive and curative programmes. Successive Governments have maintained reasonably high levels of expenditure on health, averaging about 6 per cent of total government expenditure until the 1970s. In 1982, about 1.3 per cent of GNP (Gross national product) or 3.2 per cent of total expenditure was on health. The expenditure on health services rose from Rs. 50.2 million in the financial year 1949/50 to Rs. 104 million in 1956/57 and to Rs. 210 million in 1968/69. In 1974 the amount spent was Rs. 288.9 million and in 1984 Rs. 1,751 million. As noted in the Human Development Report 1995, public expenditure on health as a percentage of the Gross Domestic Product (GDP) in 1990 was 1.8 per cent and percentage of (GDP) in 2003 was 1.6 %. In 2006, the total health budget increased by 29 per cent to Rs. 58 billion, about 2 per cent of the GDP.

33. It is generally recognized that free medical care contributed to an appreciable decline in the death rate from the late 1940s. Today, Sri Lanka has probably one of the lowest death rates among developing countries. Improved medical care has contributed to an increase in life expectancy in the country. For both males and females life expectancy has increased appreciably. In 1946, life expectancy for males was only 43.9 years, by 1953 it had risen to 61.9 years, to 66.9 years in 1977 and by 1984 to 67.5 years. In 2004 life expectancy was 74.3 years according to the Human Development Report. The life expectancy rate for females has been slightly higher throughout and in 2004 it was 77 years.

34. Similarly, the infant mortality rate has fallen from 264 per thousand in 1935 to 140 per thousand in 1950, to 46 per thousand in 1973 and to 33 per thousand in 1984. The Human Development Report 1995 registered the infant mortality rate in Sri Lanka as 18 per thousand live births in 1992 and 12 per thousand live births in 2004.

35. Two distinctive aspects of Sri Lanka's health system are that while it has an extensive coverage of the population through primary health-care facilities staffed by paramedical workers, it also provides a strong back-up referral system of clinics and hospitals staffed by both physicians and paramedical workers. The World Health Organization (WHO) and the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) have focused on the primary health-care strategy of Sri Lanka as a cost-effective and successful model for developing countries to emulate.

36. Free health care based on the primary health-care system has led to the expansion and the availability of medical services and very high health awareness in all parts of the country. Along with free education, the Government has continued the development of medical schools that have maintained high standards and has provided the basis for the advancement of medical education and research. Sri Lanka has been able to develop a functional partnership of health work infrastructure combining governmental, intergovernmental and non-governmental institutions to project and implement an island-wide primary health-care network which is perhaps unique in the developing world.

37. Furthermore, the Western-type health-care system coexists with a government regulated system of traditional Ayurvedic medicine. All economic groups make use of the Ayurvedic system. The traditional system complements the Western-type health facilities and has broadened the choice for the consumer.

38. The health sector Master Plan covering 2007 - 2016 highlights the policy and strategic framework for developing an innovative health-care system in the country. The policy ensures easy access to quality and modern healthcare services for all with emphasis on needs of the lower income groups and those most vulnerable in the society. There are 606 government hospitals with 61,835 beds in the country, which accounts to 3.1 beds per 1,000 persons. There were 9,648 qualified doctors in the state health sector, a doctor for every 2,061 persons and 20,549 qualified nurses, a nurse for every 968 persons. The health policy framework also recognizes the role of the private sector for providing an efficient and cost effective healthcare service. Sri Lanka has been successful in controlling communicable diseases such as malaria, encephalitis, measles, polio, leprosy, etc. Several health projects were in progress in 2006. A modern blood bank was set up. An ultra modern Neuro Trauma Treatment unit is under construction at the National Hospital, Colombo. A “Linear Accelerator” for cancer treatment has been established at Maharagama. Under the post-tsunami reconstruction programme 285 projects have been identified for development. A total of 97 projects had been completed by end 2006. In the budget 2007, it has been proposed to upgrade all health centres in the estate sector as a special project. Under the Suwa Udana programme, mobile health clinics as well as health promotion and educational programmes, were conducted at divisional levels. Further, action has been taken to upgrade 17 hospitals located in rural areas. The “amazing health infrastructure” of Sri Lanka was complimented by WHO as ensuring that there were no epidemics and no victim was left uncovered, during the unprecedented Tsunami crisis in 2004.

Housing

39. Sri Lanka had taken the lead in highlighting the international importance of housing through such initiatives as 1987 as the International Year of Shelter for the Homeless Year (IYSH) which was adopted by the United Nations.

40. The long-term housing development policy, as indicated in the Ten-year Vision, envisages meeting a large part of the backlog and growing demand for houses. The policy aims at providing government assistance for needy groups as well as ensuring planned human settlements. There are several government institutions engaged in facilitating housing development for targeted groups. The National Housing Development Authority (NHDA), the main public sector institution that implements housing programmes especially targeting low-income households, has introduced several new housing programmes. NHDA completed 46,021 housing units under various housing development programmes in 2006. Real Estate Exchange Ltd. (REEL) is planning to uplift the living standards of shanty dwellers of about 66,000 in urban centres within the next 10 years by providing them with better housing and other infrastructure facilities. The REEL has initiated construction of 910 housing units during 2006.

Social equity and social protection programmes

41. Sri Lanka enjoys the most extensive social protection coverage in the South Asian region. Safety net programmes are aimed at helping the low income families to cope with poverty. The Samurdhi programme is the main safety net programme currently implemented by the Government to support the poor to maintain their living standards, while also helping them to emerge from poverty. The Samurdhi programme was further strengthened in 2006. The Samurdhi Authority of Sri Lanka (SASL) launched various income generation programmes, community development programmes as well as capacity building programmes during the year to support the Samurdhi beneficiaries to escape from poverty and low standard of living. The Janapubudu programme issued 97,068 loans amounting to Rs. 1,369 million to finance small scale enterprises. The Gampubudu programme aimed at upgrading infrastructure facilities of villages, the Diriya Piyasa to address the shelter problem of the beneficiaries and the agricultural development programmes to increase the income levels of beneficiaries were implemented by the SASL in 2006. The cash grants to Samurdhi beneficiaries were increased by 50 per cent in 2006. The value of nutrition pack given to pregnant women was increased to Rs. 500 and a special nutrition programme was launched for children of Samurdhi and other under-privileged families through the supply of a glass of fresh milk daily to each child aged between 2 to 5. Safety net programmes need to be further streamlined aiming at empowering the poor to extend their contribution to the development of the economy. Population in conflict affected areas also has to be protected by providing effective relief, rehabilitation and reconstruction services.

42. Compared to several other developing countries, Sri Lanka has been successful in achieving reasonable levels of income distribution and raising the living standards of the poorer section of the community, thereby harmonizing limited economic growth with redistribution. The use of conventional statistical indicators such as growth rates and per capita income to assess the progress of Sri Lanka seems to be inadequate in the light of achievements in social welfare and income distribution. What is of significance in the case of Sri Lanka is that there has been equitable distribution of income promoting equality even as a relatively poor country.

43. Government policies in the past three decades have contributed to the transference of income to the domestic agricultural sector in many ways including extensive land reform, government resettlement and land distribution, etc.

44. The wages of plantation workers, in the earlier period, were always lower than those of their counterparts in the urban areas. However, family income in the estate sector was considerably higher than in the rural sector. Affirmative action deriving from the general welfare policies of the Government was responsible for this. Although the estate population, as a whole, has been poor, subsidies and government welfare expenditure have helped to sustain reasonable levels of nutrition and health standards. Furthermore, plantation workers have been assured of work throughout the year, unlike in other occupations where there is greater uncertainty in regard to the number of days of work available.

45. Changes in income and the ownership of wealth have also been effected through tenurial reforms and the creation of institutions for the development of agriculture. The Paddy Lands Act of 1958 constituted a significant landmark in rural rehabilitation and economic development. The system of tenure of paddy lands which prevailed before 1958 had been in operation in Sri Lanka from time immemorial. Of the total paddy land, nearly 400,000 acres were cultivated by 300,000 tenant farmers. The system of tenancy that prevailed before was unsatisfactory because adequate incentives for cultivation were lacking in view of the fact that landlords ultimately received the bulk of the crop, very often even without bearing any part of the cost of production. The Paddy Lands Act gave security of tenure to tenant farmers. The Act has, to some extent, relieved indebtedness because farmers have enjoyed a bigger share of the crop and have been in a better position to repay their debts.

46. The diffusion of wealth has figured as a vital component of economic policy in Sri Lanka because income from property has constituted a major share of total income. Hitherto, property had been owned by a relatively small segment of the total population. When the first phase of the land reform programme was initiated in 1972 only some 5,000 landowners in a population of 13 million were affected by the ceiling on land ownership. These figures are an index of the concentration of land ownership. In the rural areas, paddy lands constituted the most important form of wealth and about 33 per cent of these lands were cultivated by tenant farmers who did not own the land. This implied that the bulk of the paddy lands in the country were owned by cultivators.

47. The concentration of economic power that arose from the ownership of land weakened with the introduction of land reform in 1972. Land reform was found necessary to diffuse the ownership of land and property in order to provide a base for the further development of the country's agricultural economy. The Land Reform Law of 1972 stipulated a ceiling on the amount of agricultural land which could be owned by persons in Sri Lanka. The ceiling was 25 acres of paddy land or 50 acres of other agricultural land. After 26 August 1972, any land owned in excess of this ceiling was automatically vested in the Land Reform Commission. The total extent of agricultural land declared to the Commission was in the region of 1.2 million acres. Of this, about 638,000 acres were under the major crops, tea, rubber, coconut and paddy. Of the declared total, the Land Reform Commission acquired under the law 559,377 acres; approximately one third of this acreage was uncultivated land, while tea accounted for nearly one fourth, rubber about 15 per cent and coconut about 10 per cent of the area under cultivation.

48. The Government income distribution strategies have been put into operation through labour legislation and the minimum wage machinery. The minimum wages are determined by the Wages Boards established under the Wages Boards Ordinance. Today there are 43 Wage Boards covering vital trades and substantial part of the working population of the country. In addition to the minimum wages determined by the Wages Boards, over the years, there were many instances of Government intervention by way of legislation or Emergency Regulations in increasing wages. The latest legislation was enacted in 2005, and consequently, each worker became entitled to a salary increase of Rs. 1,000 per month.

49. In addition to the minimum wages there are productivity linked wages such as: bonuses linked to profits/production; incentives for exceeding norms; attendance bonuses; buy back of leave; special increments etc. Some workplaces also offer fringe benefits, which include risk allowances, subsidized travel; additional holidays and leave with pay; overtime and better terms and conditions.

50. In terms of the Industrial Disputes Act, the employers and the workers in the organized sector could enter into collective agreements in order to pay higher wages than the minimum wage, and to make the workers entitled to better terms and conditions of employment. The said Act also empowers the Minister of Labour to extend the terms and conditions of employment agreed between employers and workers in certain establishments in a trade, to cover all the workers in that trade.

51. The legislation also provides protection for different contingencies the workers encounter during their employment, and after retirement. The Employees Provident Fund Scheme and the Employees Trust Fund scheme are the largest social security schemes in the country which provide coverage to all formal sector workers. The Employees Provident Fund scheme provides contributory lump-sum payment to workers at the time of retirement, total disablement etc., while the Employees Trust Fund Board provides benefits at the time of retirement, change of employment, disablement, and medical coverage for critical illnesses.

52. For the benefit of the informal sector workers contributory pension schemes, namely, Farmers Pension and Social Security Benefits Scheme, Fishermen's Pensions scheme, tea small holders "Tea Shakthi Pension Scheme", and for self-employed and low income earners, Pension and Social Security Scheme, are in operation.

53. In respect of female workers, maternity protection is ensured through the Maternity Benefits Ordinance and the Shop and Office Employees Act. The law provides income support, required leave and health protection to the mother and the child.

54. Since independence, successive Governments in Sri Lanka have continued policies of providing extensive benefits to all segments of the population. These have included safety net programmes, free education, free medical care and subsidized prices for public transportation and housing. Since these liberal welfare measures have been available over a long period, Sri Lanka occupies an advanced position in terms of the quality of life of the population, even as a comparatively poor country (see Physical Quality of Life index first developed by the Overseas Development Council as well as the more recent Human Development Report).

7. Post-tsunami reconstruction

55. The 2004 Tsunami was catastrophic. It claimed 35,322 human lives, displaced over 500,000 persons, damaged or destroyed about 100,000 homes and resulted in over 150,000 persons losing their livelihoods. The cost of Tsunami damage to the economy has been estimated at around 4.5 per cent of the GDP.

56. Notwithstanding the enormous negative impacts of the Tsunami, the reconstruction process presented opportunities for building back better. The Government was able to quickly restore basic services. The power supply to affected areas was restored within two months after the Tsunami. Emergency water supplies were provided to affected areas and immediate repairs were completed. Housing, including transitional and permanent housing remains one of the most complex areas of post-tsunami reconstruction. 73,697 fully and partially damaged houses had been reconstructed by December 2007 and 13, 127 are in progress. Restoration of infrastructure is on-going. Progress of reconstruction is being monitored in order to address any inadequacies.

57. The Ministry of Health has been successful in preventing the outbreak of disease among affected populations in the initial Tsunami aftermath and over the past two years. School attendance of children previously enrolled at Tsunami damaged schools and schools damaged through use as internally displaced persons (IDP) camps was quickly normalized. Support for reconstruction of directly damaged schools was successfully mobilized and 57 per cent of schools are in various stages of construction. The Government has recently accessed funding to repair the four damaged universities. To date livelihoods restoration has been via cash grants, cash for work, asset replacement and microfinance systems.

58. Mechanisms and campaigns for strengthening the prevention of abuse, exploitation and neglect of children and women in Tsunami affected areas were developed and Disaster Relief Monitoring Units Helpdesks have been established in nine Tsunami affected districts to monitor services and address grievances.

59. A number of initiatives were launched to strengthen disaster risk management capacity at all levels including the enactment of the Sri Lanka Disaster Management Act in the Parliament in May 2005 and a Cabinet Minister being tasked with the portfolio of Disaster management. A Disaster Management framework was created that led to a policy shift from response based mechanisms to a proactive approach towards risk. At the community level, risk reduction was encouraged through awareness campaigns and a number of initiatives to encourage volunteerism in disaster management.

B. Constitutional, political and legal structure of the State

1. Constitutional, political and legal structure

60. Sri Lanka is a sovereign state within the Commonwealth of Nations. The Constitution in article 1 states that “Sri Lanka is a Free, Sovereign, Independent and Democratic Socialist Republic and shall be known as the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka”. Upon gaining independence from Britain in 1948, Sri Lanka (then known as Ceylon) became a dominion within the British Commonwealth of Nations, a loose alliance of mostly former British colonies. The Head of State was formerly the British monarch, represented by a Governor General.

61. In 1972 the country adopted a new Constitution that formally changed its name from Ceylon to Sri Lanka and established it as a Republic. An appointed President replaced the British monarch as the Constitutional Head of State. In 1978 Sri Lanka enacted a new Constitution that established the popular direct election of an Executive President.

62. For all its years as an independent country, Sri Lanka has had an active multiparty system, democratically elected Governments, and peaceful transfers of power. Universal adult suffrage has been in place since 1931. Women were given the right to vote as far back as 1931. The minimum voting age is 18.

63. The 1978 Constitution changed the formal name of the country from the Republic of Sri Lanka to the Democratic Socialist Republic (DSR) of Sri Lanka and established a presidential form of Government similar to that operating in France under the Fifth Republic. The Constitution contains 172 articles divided into 24 chapters. The Constitution of Sri Lanka establishes a Democratic Socialist Republic in Sri Lanka, which is also a unitary state. The Government is a mixture of the presidential system and the parliamentary system. The President of Sri Lanka is the Head of State, the Commander in Chief of the armed forces, as well as Head of Government, and is popularly elected for a six-year term. In the exercise of duties, the President is responsible to the Parliament of Sri Lanka, which is a unicameral 225-member legislature. The President appoints and heads a Cabinet of Ministers composed of elected members of Parliament.

64. The President appoints the Prime Minister, who leads the ruling party in parliament and shares many executive responsibilities, mainly in domestic affairs.

65. Members of Parliament are elected by universal (adult) suffrage based on a modified proportional representation system by district, for a six-year term. The party that receives the largest number of valid votes in each constituency gains a unique “bonus seat”. The President may summon, prorogue, or end a legislative session and dissolve Parliament any time after it has served for one year. The Parliament reserves the power to make all laws.

66. The Constitution recognizes and guarantees a broad range of fundamental rights including: freedom of thought and conscience; religious freedom; freedom from discrimination on the basis of race, religion, sex or caste; freedom of speech; basic legal protection including freedom from arbitrary arrest or detention; freedom to engage in any lawful occupation; and freedom of movement and travel. These rights are guaranteed to stateless persons who have been resident in Sri Lanka for 10 years following promulgation of the Constitution. Exercise of the fundamental rights, however, can be restricted in situations where national security is at risk or when the otherwise lawful actions of persons (such as speech or publication) detract from racial or religious harmony or endanger “public health and morality.” As per article 15, paragraph 7, exercise and operation of all the fundamental rights declared and recognized by articles 12, 13, paragraphs 1 and 2, and 14 shall be subject to such restrictions as may be prescribed by law in the interests of national security, public order and the protection of public health or morality, or for the purpose of securing due recognition and respect for the rights and freedoms of others, or of meeting the just requirements of the general welfare of a democratic society.

67. The Constitution contains a section devoted to directive principles of state policy. These encompass a broad range of policy goals, including the establishment of a “democratic socialist society” and a just distribution of wealth; economic development; and the raising of cultural and educational standards. The directive principles also include a commitment of decentralizing the country’s administration and promoting national unity by eliminating all forms of discrimination. The duties of citizens (including the fostering of national unity) are also enumerated.

68. Amendment of the Constitution requires the vote of two-thirds of Parliament. In addition, measures that affect “the independent, unitary, and democratic nature of the State,” the Buddhist religion, fundamental rights, or the length of the term of office of President or Parliament must be approved by a popular referendum. Bills judged “inconsistent with the Constitution” cannot become law unless two-thirds of Parliament approve.

69. Under the Constitution, the highest court is the Supreme Court, headed by a Chief Justice and eleven associate judges. The Supreme Court, Court of Appeal and High Court judges are appointed by the President. Supreme Court and Court of Appeal judges can be removed on grounds of incompetence or misdemeanour by a majority of Parliament, whereas High Court judges can be removed only by the Judicial Service Commission consisting of the Chief Justice and two Supreme Court judges. The Supreme Court has the power of judicial review of Bills; it can determine whether an Act of Parliament is consistent with the principles of the Constitution and whether a referendum must be taken on a Bill.

70. Sri Lanka has the framework of a presidential representative democratic republic, whereby the President of Sri Lanka is both Head of State and Head of Government, and of a multi-party system. Executive power is exercised by the Government. Legislative power is vested in Parliament. The Judiciary is independent of the Executive and the Legislature.

71. The Thirteenth Amendment to the Constitution which came into effect on 19 November 1987 provides for a considerable degree of devolution to the Provincial Councils. The Thirteenth Amendment (Ninth Schedule) provides for three lists of subjects and functions, for purposes of devolution, i.e. Provincial Council List, List reserved by the Centre and the Concurrent List. Every Provincial Council may, subject to the provisions of the Constitution, make statutes applicable to the Province for which it is established, with respect to any matter set out in the Provincial Council List. Parliament may make laws with respect to any matter set out in the Concurrent List after such consultation with all Provincial Councils as Parliament may consider appropriate in the circumstances of each case. A Provincial Council has no power to make statutes on any matter set out in the Reserved List.

72. On 22 January 2008, the All Party Representative Committee (APRC) identified a course of action to achieve maximum and effective devolution of power to the provinces in the short term. This envisaged an interim arrangement on restoration of democratically elected Provincial Councils in the North and the East. One of the key areas identified by the APRC was that under the Thirteenth Amendment, Provincial Councils were set up throughout Sri Lanka and powers were devolved to the Council under a Provincial List and a Concurrent List.

73. The APRC observed that the implementation of subjects and functions devolved on the provinces through the Concurrent List had not taken place due to the fact that most of these subjects and functions were retained by the Centre as if they also belonged to the Reserved List which contained subjects and functions exclusively assigned to the Centre. Although the Constitution under article 154 had envisaged a consultative process between the Provincial Councils and the Centre with regard to devolution of powers under the Concurrent List, there had been shortcomings. Accordingly, the APRC recommended that the Government should endeavour to implement the Thirteenth Amendment in respect of legislative, executive and administrative powers overcoming these existing shortcomings. The APRC also recommended immediate elections for the Provincial Council in the Eastern Province. Accordingly nominations for Provincial Council Elections in the East have been fixed for 27 March 2008. It was also recommended, taking into account the existing conditions in the Northern Province, an alternative arrangement for the people in that part of the island to enjoy the fruits of devolution through an interim council that reflects the ethnic character of the area and which will aid and advise the Governor.

2. Statutory and customary law

74. Sri Lanka has been subject to centuries of Portuguese, Dutch and British domination. From the time of independence in 1948, the legal system of Sri Lanka has developed into a rich, varied complex system comprising a mixture of Roman Dutch law which is the Common Law, the English law which applies in commercial matters and personal laws namely Muslim Law, Kandyan Law, and Thesavalamai law (Jaffna Tamils). The basis of Criminal Law and procedure is the English common law included in statutory provisions, while the basis for resolving civil matters is governed by Roman Dutch Law. After Sri Lanka was colonized by the British Empire, British laws were gradually applied throughout the nation. Sri Lanka has an adversarial system of justice. The Attorney-General is the principal law officer of the State. Sir Richard Ottley, Chief Justice, in 1830 answering a question addressed to him by a Royal Commission of Inquiry said that “the laws, in the Island are multifarious”. In Casim vs. Dingihamy (1906) 9 NLR at p. 274, Middleton PJ, it was mentioned that “Ceylon is a polygenous country with diverse systems of law”. In any such legal system there are bound to be some disparities in the interplay of different legal principles and values.

75. In 1997, the Government introduced legislation to the effect that no marriage will be valid unless both parties to the marriage have completed 18 years of age. However, the provision regarding consent to the marriage of a minor was not changed. Courts have interpreted the law to effect an absolute prohibition on the marriage of any person who has not completed the age of 18. The National Child Protection Authority (NCPA) forwards complaints regarding underage marriages to the Registrar General to take action against Registrars who solemnize these marriages. The Registrar General has issued a circular to all Registrars of Marriages to check the intended partners' identity cards or birth certificates to ascertain the age (Age of Majority (Amendment) Act No. 17 of 1989).

76. Thus no person under the age of 18 can contract a legal marriage even with the consent of the parents or guardians. This has given rise to some social problems since there are instances where girls and boys under the age of 18 have sexual intercourse with the consent of both parties, sometimes resulting in pregnancy. Even where the parties are willing to marry in such cases the law presently in force does not allow them to do so and reports from the police indicate that the girl is left with an illegitimate child and left to manage all attendant social, financial and other problems on her own.

77. Sri Lankan law decrees that a man who has sexual intercourse with a woman with or without her consent when she is under 16 years of age commits rape, unless the woman is his wife who is over 12 years of age and is not judicially separated from him. The reference to 12 year-old here is a result of the Muslim Customary Law which allows a woman of 12 to contract a legal marriage.

78. Under the Muslim Marriage and Divorce Act, which is a codification of customary Muslim laws and practices, it is not necessary to obtain in writing the consent of a Muslim bride.

79. Therefore though the law conforms to international standards regarding the minimum age for marriage except in the case of Muslims, there are attendant problems that call for considered action and resolution, while taking into account the sensitivities of particular ethnic or religious groups.

80. The Sri Lankan legal system has long recognized the equality of married women being able to enjoy the status of an equal partner (femme sole) in terms of full rights relating to ownership of property independent of their spouses and also independent capacity to contract. Non-discrimination on the grounds of sex is a seminal principle underlying the corpus of human rights law in Sri Lanka. In the area of inheritance, some discrimination against women still exists in certain personal laws, entrenched in the customs, traditions and culture of the various ethnic groups of Sri Lanka. Several initiatives taken by the Government to create awareness on the subject as a prelude to changing the personal law has met with resistance from those very ethnic groups.

3. Administration of justice

81. The structure of the Courts of Law:

- (a) Supreme Court;
- (b) Court of Appeal;

- (c) High Court exercising Civil Appellate Jurisdiction;
- (d) High Court exercising original criminal jurisdiction;
- (e) District Courts;
- (f) Magistrate's Courts;
- (g) Primary Courts.

82. The Constitution prescribes in article 105 that institutions for the administration of justice which protect and enforce the rights of the people, shall be the Supreme Court, the Court of Appeal, the High Court, and the other courts of first instance, tribunals or such institutions as Parliament may from time to time establish. The Supreme Court and the Court of Appeal are each a superior court of record.

83. Articles 107-117 of the Constitution contain provisions guaranteeing the independence of the judiciary. They provide, inter alia, for the appointment of the Chief Justice, the President of the Court of Appeal and every other judge of the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeal, by the President. Every such judge holds office during "good behaviour" and shall not be removed except by an order of the President, made after an address of Parliament, supported by the majority of the total number of the members of the Parliament, has been presented to the President for such removal on a finding of proved misbehaviour or incapacity.

84. For further details on the constitution of the above courts, judges, appointment procedure, jurisdiction of courts, sittings, rules of courts, etc. please see Ministry of Justice and Law Reforms website: www.justiceministry.gov.lk.

Human rights

85. The Ministry of Disaster Management and Human Rights was established in terms of the gazette notification issued on 20 February 2006. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs works in close coordination with the Human Rights Ministry in promoting human rights in the country and also coordinate in activities with the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and other international and regional human rights institutions.

86. Please see Ministry of Justice and Law Reforms website: www.justiceministry.gov.lk for the following additional information:

- (a) Development of Human Rights in Sri Lanka;
- (b) Constitution of 1972;
- (c) Constitution of 1978;
- (d) Fundamental Rights recognized in the Constitution;
- (e) Language Rights;
- (f) Institutions responsible for the protection and promotion of Fundamental Rights;
- (g) Proposed reforms.

Sri Lanka police service

87. Please see the official website of the Sri Lanka Police service (www.police.lk) for a comprehensive, history, organizational chart, crime statistics and also information concerning their Human Rights Division, Women and Child Bureau, etc.
88. The Sri Lanka Police has placed great emphasis in recent years on striving to enhance capacity building and the professionalism of the Service. The importance of policing in any peace process is widely acknowledged.
89. Swedish assistance was sought and a programme to enhance capacity in civilian policing, crime scene investigation and related areas was initiated in 2005. Training in human rights and professionalism is given high priority. Another important area of focus is community policing and training in aspects of community policing has been undertaken in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.
90. In January 2008 a newly built child-friendly District Head Office for the Children and Women's Bureau in Anuradhapura was handed over to the Police. It will become the coordinating head office of the Children and Women Desks of 23 police stations in the district. It was built with the assistance of non-governmental organizations (NGO) involving all stakeholders.
91. Yet another significant step in the 141 year old history of the Sri Lanka Police was taken recently when the Service welcomed its first ever batch of Tamil stream Police at a passing out parade of 175 new police constables (125 men and 50 women) trained at the Kallady Police Training College in Batticaloa. The college is the first training school to be established in the Eastern Province of the country. This batch of recruits were Tamil Sri Lankans from Batticaloa and Ampara Districts, the first recruits taken specifically from these areas and trained in the Tamil medium. They were deployed back into their communities.
92. It has been a matter of regret in recent years that the Sri Lankan security forces have not been clearly multi-ethnic in composition. Though applications have always been called from all citizens of the country, for various reasons, including diffidence caused by previous language policies, very few Tamils have joined in the recent past. More recently, there have been fears amongst Tamils, given the strategy of terrorist groups that Tamils serving in security forces were specifically to be targets of attack, being denigrated as traitors. Tamil officers serving in the Department were threatened by the LTTE to force them to leave the service, and renewed attempts by the Government to recruit Tamil officers to the service did not have desired results. It seemed likely then that Sri Lanka's proud record of a multi-ethnic police force, with two recent Inspectors General of Police being Tamil, would not easily be maintained.
93. The Government however is committed to the attainment of such objective and in the short term it is certainly essential to have Tamil officers serving in Police Stations in North and East as per the ratio of the population in the respective areas. Another important aspect is to give an opportunity to Tamil youth in these areas to serve their own communities, which will more easily allow the force to show the required concern and commitment. These new training policies are in keeping with the commitment of the Government to fully implement the official languages policy, and develop confidence in all citizens that they are full stakeholders in government institutions. They will provide the backbone of the reawakening that the Government brings to the East now, and which it is hoped will soon be extended to the North.

94. Training of these new recruits commenced on 8 October 2007 at Kallady Training Centre and the trainees were provided four months of training which included community policing aspects and language training. The intake of Tamil youths into the service, to transform them into sensitive and skilled Police officers for work in their respective areas, will immensely help the full implementation of the Thirteenth Amendment to the Constitution which the Government has decided on. The next intake of 250 men and women will take place shortly and a similar programme would also shortly target the Estate Sector area in the middle of the country too.

Legal Aid Commission

95. The Legal Aid Commission of Sri Lanka was established by Law, No. 27 of 1978. The Commission comprises nine members, three of whom are appointed by the Minister of Justice and six members nominated by the Bar Council of Sri Lanka. The Legal Aid Commission offers legal aid to the needy people island wide irrespective of nationality, cast, creed, religion, locality or political affinity.

96. The Legal Aid Commission gives legal advice and provides representation in litigation and assistance for and on behalf of deserving persons including the services of Attorneys-at-Law and also other assistance as may be necessary for the conduct of legal proceedings. The powers and functions of the Legal Aid Commission include areas such as research in respect of legal aid, making of submissions to law reform agencies both in Sri Lanka and abroad and also to the State, provision of information to the public on the availability of legal aid, cooperating with institutions and bodies responsible for the education and training of persons providing legal aid, etc.

97. The Legal Aid Commission at its inception carried out its functions on a small state grant supplemented with limited funding from funding agencies. However, the year 2006 ushered in a new era for legal aid with the Commission receiving for the first time an enhanced grant of Rs. 27 million from the State. Additional funds were also received from certain funding sources.

98. The number of Legal Aid centres increased in 2006 from a mere 12 to 33 and further in 2007. The introduction of developmental legal aid desks and the legal aid page in the newspapers have been two important areas in the work of the Legal Aid Commission. The statistics given below reveal the nature of cases filed in 2006.

Litigation - Summary of court cases
Pending cases brought forward from 2005	19 332

99. Each Legal Aid Centre has a Panel of Lawyers who are paid on a case by case by basis. The developmental legal aid is a novel concept concentrating on sectors of society that need special protection. Thus the Legal Aid Commission has the following desks:

- (a) Traditional desks:
 - (i) Human Rights Bureau;
 - (ii) Prisoners Rights Desk;
 - (iii) Apprentices Training Programme Desk;
 - (iv) Bench and Bar Programme and Young Lawyers Training Programme Desk;
 - (v) Awareness Programme for Public, Janadiviyata Neethiya Programme Desk;
- (b) Newly introduced Developmental Legal Aid Desks:
 - (i) Migrants Workers Rights Desk;
 - (ii) School Programme Desk (Awareness Programmes, Essay Competition, Establishment of Legal Circles etc.);
 - (iii) Women Rights Desk;
 - (iv) Child Rights Desk;
 - (v) Elders Rights Desk;

- (vi) Anti-Corruption Desk;
- (vii) Internally Displaced Persons Desk (2007);
- (viii) Labour and Industrial Disputes Desk (2007);
- (ix) Consumer Protection Desk;
- (x) Disabled Persons Rights Desk;
- (xi) Additionally there is a desk comprising lawyer who handle the question/answer pages of the Daily News and Lankadeepa news papers.

100. Thus in totality there are 16 desks established in the head office. Their work is implemented via the head-office and island wide centres.

Witness protection

101. Intensive work involved in drafting national legislation on Assistance and Protection for Victims and Witnesses of Crime began in mid 2006. The Attorney-General's Department, presented a preliminary draft of a proposed bill to the Law Commission of Sri Lanka in late 2006. Consultations were held with a number of stakeholders and the Law Commission began considering the proposals in early 2007. The preliminary draft bill went through a number of modifications and since then a cabinet paper submitted by the President has been approved by the Cabinet. The Legal Draftsman has sent the draft bill to the Ministry of Justice which is in the process of finalizing it. It is expected to be enacted in the near future.

102. It is important to note that Victim and Witness Assistance and Protection programmes established by legislation are a rare phenomenon in the context of developing countries. Such systems have been introduced in the developed world in the last two decades, with the allocation of high levels of resources and funding which developing countries can ill afford. It is therefore significant that Sri Lanka, a developing country, facing terrorism and all the consequent problems associated with combating it, is striving to ensure that human rights and the rule of law prevails and is making every possible effort to introduce such a system.

103. The Bill seeks to establish a National Authority for the Protection of Victims of Crime and Witness and an Advisory Commission. The Authority is charged with the duty of promoting inter alia, the recognition of, and respect for, the rights and entitlements of victims of crime and witnesses and protecting such rights and entitlements.

104. A high powered Advisory Commission on Victims of Crime and Witnesses is established to advise the Board and the Director General of the Authority on the policy and overall direction to be adopted by the Authority, the general performance and discharge of duties and functions of the Authority and the manner in which the duties and functions of the Authority should be given effect to.

105. The Bill seeks to establish the Victims of Crime and Witnesses Assistance and Protection Division of the Sri Lanka Police Department.

106. The Bill also seeks to establish the Victims of Crime and Witnesses Protection Fund for the purpose of paying compensation to victims of crime, dependants of victims of crime who had died as a result of such crime, and for the purpose of paying the expenses incurred by a victim of crime in receiving medical treatment and necessary assistance, and also for the purpose of paying monies necessary to provide protection and for the performance and discharge of the functions of the Authority under the Act.

4. Non-governmental organizations

107. The National Secretariat for Non-Governmental Organization was established to ensure that all the NGOs which are functioning in Sri Lanka are duly registered. Since NGOs were expected to play a complementary role to that of the Government, and in recognition of its selfless nature, the presence and operation of NGOs was welcomed by the Government.

108. There were, however, no specific laws and regulations governing the operation of NGOs in Sri Lanka. In 1980 the Government enacted the Voluntary Social Services Organizations (Registration and Supervision) Act which sought to introduce a system of registration and supervision of activities of NGOs. However, this Act was not strictly implemented and the registration of NGOs was not strictly followed.

109. Following public concerns and complaints against certain NGOs by their employees, in 1990, the then President appointed a Commission to go into the activities of NGOs and to make recommendations for their proper functioning. Pursuant to the recommendations made by this Commission, regulations were passed under the Public Security Ordinance obligating compulsory registration of NGOs which have a turnover of Rs. 50,000 and above. However, with the lapse of the Emergency Regulations, this system too lapsed. In 1995 the Ministry of Health, Highways and Social Services proposed certain amendments to the 1980 Act. The draft legislation provided for the establishment of an NGO Advisory Council and appointment of Interim Boards of Management to administer the affairs of NGOs. In 1998 the draft legislation was approved by the Parliament. (Act No. 8 of 1998). A Secretariat for NGOs was established in 1996 in the Ministry of Health, Highways and Social Services.

110. A Parliamentary Select committee is inquiring into a range of allegations against NGOs/international non-governmental organizations (INGO) particularly relating to irregular disbursement of funds intended for Tsunami victims. The NGO secretariat is presently functioning under the purview of the Ministry of Social Services and Social Welfare. Please see the NGO secretariat website www.ngosecretariat.gov.lk for details.

II. GENERAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE PROMOTION AND PROTECTION OF HUMAN RIGHTS

A. Acceptance of international human rights norms

1. Core human rights instruments and their optional protocols

111. Sri Lanka has become a party to all seven core international human rights instruments and several optional protocols. Please see information on the status of ratification at annex I.

Reservations and declarations

112. Sri Lanka has made declarations in respect of three conventions as follows (see <http://www2.ohchr.org/english/bodies/ratification/1.htm>).

International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families

113. Sri Lanka is a State party to the above Convention (entry into force 1 July 2003) which seeks to ensure minimum international guarantees relating to the human rights of migrant workers and their families. However, major labour recipient countries are yet to become parties to this Convention. Since Sri Lanka is a labour exporting country, it is vital in the interest of Sri Lankan migrants that labour recipient countries accede to the above Convention in order to ensure a strong legal framework for the protection of the rights of migrant workers through adherence to international minimum standards.

114. Sri Lanka has made following declaration:

Article 8, paragraph 2

“The right of non-Sri Lankans to enter and remain in Sri Lanka shall be subject to existing visa regulations.”

Article 29

“According to the Citizenship Act No. 18 of 1948, citizenship rights flow from the father and in the event a child is born out of wedlock, from the mother. A child will be deemed to be a citizen of Sri Lanka if he and his father were born in Sri Lanka before 1.11.49 or if at the time of his birth the father was a Sri Lankan.” This position is now changed by the Citizenship (Amendment) Act No. 16 of 2003. This Act recognizes the right of a mother who is a Sri Lankan citizen to pass citizenship to her children irrespective of the nationality of the father. Hitherto, only a father could pass Sri Lankan citizenship to his children. According to the Act, children born even before the passing of the legislation but after November 15, 1948 will have the right to Sri Lanka citizenship even if only the mother is a Sri Lankan citizen.

Article 49

“Resident visas to expatriate workers are allowed in respect of identified professions where there is a dearth of qualified personnel. Existing visa regulations do not permit migrant workers either to change their professions or the institutions in which they have been authorized to work, which is the basis on which the visa is issued.”

Article 54

“Protection against dismissal, quantum of remuneration, period of employment, etc., are governed by the terms of individual contracts entered into between the worker and the organization which employs him. A visa issued to an expatriate worker under the visa regulations is limited to a pre-identified job assignment.”

Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the involvement of children in armed conflict

115. The following declaration has been made:

“The Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka [...] declares in accordance with article 3 (2) of the Protocol that under the laws of Sri Lanka:

- (a) There is no compulsory, forced or coerced recruitment into the national armed forces;
- (b) Recruitment is solely on a voluntary basis;
- (c) The minimum age for voluntary recruitment into national armed forces is 18 years.”

Optional Protocol to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights

116. Sri Lanka was one of the few countries in the Asian region to become a party to the Optional Protocol. In 1997 Sri Lanka acceded to the Optional Protocol as the Government was committed to continue to honour its international treaty obligations in the area of human rights, including the Optional Protocol.

117. The declaration made by Sri Lanka at the time of accession is as follows:

“The Government of the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka pursuant to article 1 of the Optional Protocol recognize the competence of the Human Rights Committee to receive and consider communications from individuals subject to the jurisdiction of the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka, who claim to be victims of a violation of any of the rights set forth in the Covenant which results either from acts, omissions, developments or events occurring after the date on which the Protocol entered into force for the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka or from a decision relating to acts, omissions, developments or events after that date. The Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka also proceeds on the understanding that the Committee shall not consider any communication from individuals unless it has ascertained that the same matter is not being examined or has not been examined under any other procedure of international investigation or settlement.”

Derogations, restrictions, or limitations

118. In Sinharasa vs. AG (SC Case 182/99), the Supreme Court in its judgement held that Sri Lanka subscribing to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights in 1980, while per se not inconsistent with the provisions of the Constitution or written law of Sri Lanka, the “accession to the Covenant binds the Republic qua state, but no legislative or other measures have been taken to give effect to the rights recognized in the Covenant as envisaged in article 2. Hence the Covenant does not have internal effect and the rights under the Covenant are not rights under the law of Sri Lanka. A substantial part of the civil and political rights referred to in the Covenant have been given legislative recognition in the Constitution of Sri Lanka, as well as in certain other legislation enacted by the Parliament. Hence Sri Lanka as a State Party to the Convention took immediate steps to enact appropriate legislation to give effect to those civil and political rights referred to in the aforesaid Covenant, for which no adequate legislative recognition was hitherto given. Enabling legislation has been enacted to give effect to the Covenant, by way of International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights Act No: 56 of 2007. The Supreme Court in its judgement also held that the accession to the Optional Protocol to the International Covenant was unconstitutional. The Attorney-General is examining the Supreme Court judgement with a view to regularizing the position with regard to the Optional Protocol.

B. Legal framework for the protection of human rights at the national level

1. Constitutional provisions

119. The preamble to the Constitution of Sri Lanka assures to “all peoples, freedom, equality, justice, fundamental human rights, and the independence of the judiciary, as the intangible heritage that guarantees the dignity and well-being of succeeding generations of the People of Sri Lanka, and of all the people of the world” who strive for “the creation and preservation of a just and free society”.

120. Articles 10 to 16 of the Constitution set out the fundamental rights which the people and citizens of Sri Lanka enjoy under constitutional protection. The Constitution is structured to promote and preserve the best democratic features which have gained universal acceptance. Almost all the important rights enumerated in the International Bill of Human Rights have been incorporated in the Constitution in chapter III entitled “Fundamental rights”:

(a) Article 10: Provides for freedom of thought, conscience and religion to every person in Sri Lanka;

(b) Article 11: Provides for freedom from torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment;

(c) Article 12: Provides that all persons are equal before the law and entitled to equal protection under the law;

(d) Article 12, paragraph 3: Provides that no person shall be subject to any disability, liability, restriction or condition with regard to access to shops, public restaurants, hotels, places of public entertainment and places of worship of his own religion on grounds of race, religion, language, caste or sex;

(e) Article 14: Provides for the right of freedom of speech and expression including right to publication, freedom of peaceful assembly, freedom of association, freedom to form and join trade unions, freedom to manifest a person’s religion or belief by practise, teaching, worship or observance, whether in public or private, freedom to promote a person’s culture and language, freedom to engage in any profession, trade, occupation, business or enterprise, freedom of movement and residence within Sri Lanka and the right of return to Sri Lanka.

121. For the first time in the history of Sri Lanka, the 1978 Constitution made fundamental rights enforceable before the highest Courts in the land. Under article 126 of the Constitution the Supreme Court has the sole and exclusive jurisdiction to hear and determine any question relating to the infringement or imminent infringement by executive or administrative action of any fundamental rights declared and recognized by the Constitution (arts. 17,126). Furthermore, if in the course of any hearing, the Court of Appeal, which is next to the Supreme Court in the hierarchy of courts, is of the view that fundamental rights have been violated, then the Court is required to refer forthwith the matter for determination by the Supreme Court.

122. Where any person alleges that any fundamental right has been infringed or is about to be infringed by executive or administrative action, he may himself or by an attorney-at-law on his behalf, within one month, apply to the Supreme Court by way of a petition asking for relief or redress in respect of such infringement. The Supreme Court is vested with the power to grant such relief or make such directions as it may deem just and equitable in the circumstances. The Court has held that its jurisdiction to grant relief is very wide and extensive. Further, the Supreme Court has constantly, including in the recent past, expanded the fundamental rights jurisdiction by broad interpretations to the rights recognized in the Constitution. Article 11 of the Constitution guarantees that no person shall be subjected to torture, cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment while article 13, paragraph 4 provides that, no person shall be punished with death or imprisonment except by order of a competent court, made in accordance with procedure established by law. Though the right to life has not been expressly incorporated under the Constitution, Supreme Court of Sri Lanka in several important fundamental rights actions (Silva vs. Iddamalgoda, 2003 (2) SLR, 63., Wewalage Rani Fernando and others, SC (FR) No. 700/2002, SCM 26/07/2004) in recent times has implicitly recognized the right to life. Thus the provisions of Chapter III of the Constitution has been creatively interpreted by the Supreme Court on these occasions and recognized this right as an implied right guaranteed under the Constitution. The interpretation of the concept of Right to Life, was further advanced to include the right not to be “disappeared” in a judgement of the Supreme Court (Kanapathipillai Machchavalan vs. OIC, Army Camp, Plantation Point, Trincomalee and Others, SC appeal No: 90/2003, SC (Spl) L.A. No: 177/2003, SCM 31.0.2003).

123. The High Court of Sri Lanka as per article 7 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights Act No. 56 of 2007, exercises jurisdiction over the enforcement of the human rights recognized under the Act. Any person aggrieved by such order made by the High Court in any petition filed under section 7 of this Act, shall have a right of appeal to the Supreme Court against such order.

124. The Constitution also empowers the Court of Appeal to issue writs of habeas corpus, mandamus, quo warranto, certiorari and procedendo. The availability of such remedies acts as a powerful deterrent against the unbridled abuse and misuse of power by the State and its agencies.

2. National Human Rights Commission

(See paragraphs 143 to 152 below)

3. Special protection systems

125. With the passage of enabling legislation with regard to the International Conventions signed or acceded to, special protection systems/mechanisms have been put into place, i.e. the National Child Protection Authority, Probation and Child Care Authority, Women’s Bureau, Foreign Employment Bureau, etc.

4. Sri Lanka Law Commission

126. The review of legislation already in force and the consideration of amendments or enactment of new legislation in order to bring the legal system in accordance with international standards of human rights is undertaken by the Sri Lanka Law Commission. The Commission is charged with the general duty of keeping under review the law, both substantive and procedural with a view to its systematic development and reform, the codification of the law, the elimination of anomalies, the repeal of obsolete and unnecessary enactments and generally the simplification and modernization of the law. It is also the duty of the Commission to keep under constant review the exercise by bodies other than Parliament of the power to legislate by subsidiary legislation with a view to ensuring that they conform to all established principles and to the rule of law. The question of supplementing the existing legislation in the light of Sri Lanka's accession to international instruments relating to human rights is also considered by the Commission.

5. Proposed Human Rights Charter

127. Sri Lanka has commenced work on drafting a Human Rights Charter that will strengthen the human rights protection framework in the country and bring Sri Lanka's human rights guarantees in line with its international obligations. The process includes engaging with community-based organizations, NGOs and members of the public. The draft Charter and the process of consultation will foster a national discourse on human rights.

6. Commission of Inquiry

128. The Commission of Inquiry Act No. 17 of 1948 provides for the appointment of commissions of inquiry into various matters. Presidential commissions of inquiry have been appointed under the terms of this act as and when significant human rights violations have been alleged to have been committed. Some recent Commissions are listed below:

(a) Presidential Commission of Inquiry (COI) was established by President Mahinda Rajapaksa in November 2006 to inquire into alleged serious violations of human rights occurring in Sri Lanka since August 2005;

(b) The work of the COI is observed by a group of international observers (International Independent Group of Eminent Persons, IIGEP) established in February 2007. The Office of the High Commissioner on Human Rights (OHCHR) was associated with defining the mandate and terms of reference of the COI and IIGEP according to international norms and standards.

129. The work undertaken by the COI, in this regard, particularly in the absence of subject specific legislation in Sri Lanka, pioneered the development of the concept of Witness Protection and is regarded as pivotal both for the work of the COI and in the national scheme in the long term.

130. The COI has established a Victim and Witness Assistance and Protection Unit (VWAPU) which is seen as critical in terms of giving witnesses sufficient confidence in the proceedings to come forward and testify without undue hindrance, fear of reprisals, intimidation, harassment and retaliation.

131. Following the November 2006 establishment of the COI, the nomination of an International Independent Group of Eminent Persons (IIGEP) by February 2007 the COI developed the VWAPU by finalizing and adopting a number of constitutional documents relating to the unit as follows:

(a) The Mandate, Organizational Structure and the Rules of Procedure of the Victim and Witness Assistance and Protection Unit;

(b) The Scheme for providing Assistance and Protection to Victims and Witnesses.

132. The VWAPU is now fully staffed and also draws upon the assistance of legal advisors and a multi disciplinary team in relevant areas of expertise. They have also developed working methodologies to provide assistance and protection to victims and witnesses. The COI and staff from the VWAPU have visited several scenes of crime in the Eastern and North Central provinces where they have met with victims and witnesses and explained the scheme of assistance and protection to them.

133. A phased fast track training proposal was developed and senior members of the VWAPU were funded by the Government to undergo the first phase which involved a comprehensive training programme in NSW Australia where they were able to have practical and personal interaction with related legal/judicial and law enforcement agencies involved in assistance and protection of victims and witnesses. The training was enhanced by the fact that the members of the delegation are drawn from those working in agencies in the Criminal Justice System which have direct links with victims and witnesses i.e. the Attorney-General's department, the Police, the Legal Aid Commission and the National Centre for Victims of Crime.

134. It is also opportune that (OHCHR) as September 2007, advised through its representative in Colombo, that in response to the initial request from the Minister of Human Rights for assistance in March 2007 and after perusing the VWAPU Phased Fast Track Programme, it was in a position to confirm support and contribute to the funding for Phase 2 of the programme. This phase envisages facilitation of a mentoring programme. Mahanama Thilakarathne Commission was established in 2006 to inquire into allegations of disappearances. The mandate given to the Commission by the President was to probe incidents of abductions, disappearances and unexplained killings throughout Sri Lanka in the recent past.

C. Framework within which human rights are promoted at the national level

1. Parliament of Sri Lanka

135. The Constitution vests the legislative power of the people in Parliament consisting of elected representatives of the people for a period of six years at a time. Parliament has the power to make laws, including laws repealing or amending the Constitution. However, certain provisions in the Constitution need the approval of the people at a referendum before they can be repealed or amended.

136. The President may from time to time summon, prorogue and dissolve Parliament. However, he cannot dissolve Parliament until a year has lapsed after the previous general elections.

137. Please see the official website of the Parliament of Sri Lanka www.parliament.lk for details.

Constitutional Council

138. In terms of article 41 (A) (1) of the Seventeenth Amendment to the Constitution, the Constitutional Council should consist of the following:

- (a) The Prime Minister;
- (b) The Speaker of Parliament;
- (c) The Leader of the Opposition;
- (d) One person appointed by the President;
- (e) Five persons appointed by the President, on the nomination of both the Prime Minister and Leader of Opposition;
- (f) One person nominated upon agreement by the majority of the Members of Parliament belonging to political parties or independent groups other than the respective political parties or independent groups to which the Prime Minister and the Leader of the Opposition belongs and appointed by the President.

139. The tenure of office of the members appointed under article (41) (A) (1) (e) and (f) above terminated in late 2004 and early 2005.

140. In terms of the article 41 (A) (5), the President should make the respective appointments upon receipt of written communication of the nominations by the Speaker under subparagraphs (e) and (f) above.

141. However, no nomination was received under subparagraph (f), resulting in the non-constitution of the Constitutional Council. Therefore in April 2006, the President appointed the Public Service Commission, the National Police Commission and the National Human Rights Commission, as it was essential that these Commissions had to be operational, out of necessity to facilitate the smooth running of the administration, while upholding the rule of law.

142. A Select Committee of Parliament was appointed in July 2006 with a mandate of assessing the operation of the Seventeenth Amendment to the Constitution, and making recommendations to resolve its procedural shortcomings and further strengthening of its objectives. The Committee is still sitting and the final report is awaited. It is expected that some anomalies in the Seventeenth Amendment can be rectified, once the report is submitted to Parliament, through an amendment to the Constitution.

2. National Human Rights Commission

143. The National Human Rights Commission of Sri Lanka (HRCSL) was established by the Human Rights Commission Act No. 21 of 1996 and came into operation on 1 July 2000. It is vested with monitoring, investigative and advisory powers in relation to human rights. It has been set up as a permanent national institution to investigate any infringement or imminent infringement of a fundamental right declared and recognized by the Constitution and to grant appropriate relief. The powers of the Commission will complement the existing national framework for the protection of human rights. Unlike Supreme Court jurisdiction, there are no time limits for filing a complaint before the National Human Rights Commission.

144. The Commission has a network of 10 Regional offices to facilitate the discharge of its functions throughout the island. It has developed a Strategic Plan 2007-2009 which gives priority to:

(a) To protect human rights and uphold the rule of law, strengthen the monitoring mechanisms through efficient and effective visiting mechanisms, various fact finding missions, researches, public hearings, meetings, etc.;

(b) To improve and adopt new investigating and inquiring techniques to handle fundamental rights cases;

(c) Strengthening the Human Rights Commission Act No. 21 of 1996;

(d) Formation of a team on bill's watch, to evolve a mechanism on the human rights aspect of any law;

(e) Special attention will be given to vulnerable groups; especially IDPs who were affected by the armed conflict and Tsunami, elders, migrant workers, disabled, women and children;

(f) Develop an appropriate human rights education system through developing a strong human rights network among government institutions and INGOs, impartial and non-controversial NGOs and United Nations Agencies, providing public awareness on fundamental rights and other human rights issues, introducing human rights in schools, establishing human rights units in schools, preparation of HRCSL manuals, documents and leaflets, annual reports;

(g) Strengthening labour rights through discussions and extending human rights education for the government sector as well as to the private sector;

(h) Improve the administrative efficiency through capacity building of the Commission;

(i) As necessitate assisting the peace process.

145. The vision of the Commission is to ensure human rights for all, and promote and protect the rule of law.

146. The Mission of the Commission is to develop a better human rights culture in Sri Lanka through protecting and promoting human rights adhering to universally recognized human rights norms and principles with a special emphasis on the fundamental rights guaranteed under the Sri Lanka Constitution, for the citizens of Sri Lanka, with the coordination and cooperation of all stakeholders that work towards protecting and promoting human rights for all.

147. In the area of dispute resolution, the Commission has the jurisdiction to inquire into any allegation regarding the infringement or imminent infringement of administrative and executive action of fundamental rights at its own initiatives, or on receiving a complaint from a person aggrieved or a body of persons concerned with the protection of human rights, acting bona fide.

148. There is provision to enable the Supreme Court to refer to the Commission such complaints pertaining to the violation of fundamental rights as they deem appropriate and, conversely, for the Commission to refer allegations of a serious nature to the Supreme Court.

149. In the year 2007 (1 January-31 August), the Head Office of the Commission received 5,054 cases and had investigated 3,031 while the balance did not fall within the mandate of the Human Rights Commission.

150. The Constitutional Council (see paragraphs 138 to 142 above) established by the Seventeenth amendment to the Constitution has not been fully constituted and, according to a ruling by the Supreme Court and the advice of the Attorney-General, such a body cannot function until all its members are in place. Accordingly, in response to what is obviously a flaw in the Act, Presidential appointments were made in the way in which such appointments had been made by previous Presidents before the Seventeenth Amendment was passed. Meanwhile a Parliamentary Select Committee has made recommendations to render the Seventeenth Amendment more practicable, so that the situation that has arisen because of the Speaker's inability to make a selection will be avoided henceforth.

151. It is worth noting that UNDP in a recent stock-taking report says, "While all of the Commission's stakeholders would prefer (some strongly so) that the appointments had been made in accordance with the Constitution, no-one was able to identify any instances where the failure to do so had demonstrably affected Commissioner's performance of their responsibilities. Some commentators did observe that the current Commission exhibited a much lower profile than its predecessor. That in itself might indicate a reluctance to challenge the Executive. There is another, perhaps more likely, explanation for this, however. The Commission comprises three retired judges and two lawyers. The judicial tradition is to 'listen, not talk', lest the judge compromise the need to appear non-partisan and free from bias." (SCOPP report of 8 January 2008, website ref: www.peaceinsrilanka.org.)

152. The Ministry for Disaster Management and Human Rights has made it clear that assistance in strengthening national human rights mechanisms is eminently desirable, and has suggested areas in which technical assistance might be forthcoming.

3. Ministry of Disaster Management and Human Rights

153. Please see the official website of the Ministry of the Disaster Management and Human Rights www.dmhr.gov.lk for details.

154. The Ministry of Disaster Management and Human Rights (M/DM&HR) was established in 2006 and, for the first time in the nation's history, provided an institutional focal point in the executive branch of Government for the promotion of human rights. Its delineated mandate (Government Gazette Extraordinary No. 1482/9 of 29 January 2007 at pp. A33, A34 issued in terms of article 44, paragraph 1 (a) of the Constitution) in relation to human rights is:

- (a) Supervision of the activities of non-governmental organizations and social welfare voluntary agencies in relation to disaster management, provision of relief and promotion of human rights;
- (b) Facilitation of and assistance to non-governmental organizations and social welfare voluntary agencies, in the fields of disaster management and human rights;
- (c) Promotion of human rights; and
- (d) Coordination with OHCHR and other international and regional human rights bodies.

155. Due to inadequate staffing at the initial stages, an ad hoc human rights Unit was established which is gradually supporting the establishment of a fully-fledged, permanent Human Rights Division in the Ministry. Some of the work of the Unit to date involved:

- (a) Supporting the development of an overall strategic framework, an action plan, programmes and projects for the Ministry's work on human rights;
- (b) Substantive, organisational and logistical support to human rights mechanisms established by or under the Ministry, including those described below.

Inter-ministerial committee on human rights (IMCHR)

156. The IMCHR, chaired by Minister for Disaster Management and Human Rights, consists of the high-level representatives from the Ministries of Defence, Public Security, Law and Order; Foreign Affairs; Justice and Law Reforms; Constitutional Affairs and National Integration, Disaster Management and Human Rights, Attorney-General's Department, the Secretariat for Coordination of the Peace Process, Human Rights Commission, Armed Forces, Police, and Prisons. In addition relevant line-ministries are requested to attend meetings when required. Its main functions are to:

- (a) Direct relevant law enforcement authorities to investigate into alleged violations of human rights reported to the Committee and call for reports on such investigations;
- (b) Direct law enforcement authorities and other Government officials to implement decisions of the Committee and to report on action taken;
- (c) Initiate regular consultations, as appropriate, with the HRC, and civil society; and
- (d) Make recommendations with regard to the promotion and protection of human rights in Sri Lanka and implement such recommendations through appropriate government agencies;

(e) Through issue-specific subcommittees, discuss and recommend measures on human rights related policy issues. (A subcommittee on the Official Languages Policy has been established, and subcommittee on developing a database collating information on alleged gross violations of human rights - killings, abductions, disappearances).

Advisory Body to the Minister of Human Rights

157. The Advisory Body to the Minister of Human Rights, which consists of members of civil society and key government officials, was established to prevent, mitigate and/or respond to alleged violations of human rights. The mandate of the Body includes:

(a) Reporting violations, imminent violations or alleged violations of human rights with a view to addressing such violations and/or taking steps to prevent such violations from occurring or being continued to be perpetrated;

(b) Assisting the Ministry in verifying the above and if necessary, engage in fact finding missions for this purpose;

(c) Visiting places of detention, ascertaining the welfare of detainees, and reporting to the Minister of steps to be taken;

(d) Conducting field missions to places where there is civil unrest or tension; assisting to defusing and mitigating such conflicts or potential conflicts and recommending measures that can be taken to mitigate such conflict or tension;

(e) Advising the Minister of any laws, regulations, directives, procedures, administrative and other practices which need to be implemented in order to protect human rights;

(f) Advising the Minister of any international human rights treaty obligations and instruments which the Government needs to comply with, and measures that could be taken to give effect to such obligations.

Coordination of humanitarian assistance

158. The Government of Sri Lanka has been providing humanitarian assistance to IDPs through the respective District Secretaries. The M/DM&HR has been complementing the efforts of the Government by coordinating assistance from international humanitarian agencies, including the United Nations agencies and the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC).

National IDP Coordination Meetings

159. M/DM&HR has been holding regular IDP Coordination Meetings at a national level, which are chaired by Mr. Mahinda Samarasinghe, Minister of Disaster Management and Human Rights. The meetings are attended by representatives of key government ministries and agencies, District Secretaries, the armed forces (Sri Lanka Army, Navy, Air force and the Police), United Nations agencies, ICRC, INGOs and NGOs. Some of the key issues that have been/are being addressed are as follows:

- (a) Facilitation of issues/constraints raised by government agents with Ministry of Defence (MOD) and other line Ministries;
- (b) Facilitation of funding, assistance needed for IDPs by raising the needs with the United Nations, I/NGO and donor community;
- (c) Issues of access for United Nations and I/NGOs to the cleared and uncleared areas;
- (d) Ministry of Defence clearance for expatriate staff of I/NGOs;
- (e) Facilitating requests for clearance of restricted items such as fuel, cement, steel and other construction material required for IDP related and development projects with Commissioner General of Essential Services (CGES), MOD and Joint Operations Headquarters (JOH);
- (f) Issues arising on registration of IDPs;
- (g) Ensuring safety and security of IDPs in camps;
- (h) Issues rising from resettlement of IDPs;
- (i) Facilitating between the United Nations, I/NGOs and Government agents, Ministry of Nation Building and Estate Infrastructure Development (M/NB&EID) with regard to the supply of essential services, (e.g., food, medicine, non-food relief items, etc.);
- (j) Confidence-building and stabilization measures for IDPs, e.g., protection and security, livelihood, civil-military liaison, etc.

Consultative Committee on Humanitarian Assistance (CCHA)

160. A decision was made in October 2006, following the President's meeting with the Ambassadors of the Co-Chair countries, that a Consultative Committee on Humanitarian Assistance (CCHA) be chaired by Mr. Mahinda Samarasinghe, Minister of Disaster Management and Human Rights and meet once a month to discuss issues concerning humanitarian assistance.

161. The CCHA deals with important policy issues and its membership is limited. Secretaries from the following ministries are represented: Defence; Foreign Affairs; Nation Building and Estate Infrastructure Development; and Resettlement and Disaster Relief Services. Presidential Advisor Mr. Basil Rajapakse, Commissioner General of Essential Services, and Secretary-General of the Secretariat for the Coordination of the Peace Process also attend.

162. The international community is represented by the Head of the co-chairs, the United Nations Resident and Humanitarian Coordinator (RC/HC); the Representative of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR); the Head of Office for the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA); the Head of Office of the European Community Humanitarian Office (ECHO); ICRC Head of Delegation, and Consortium of Humanitarian Agencies.

163. Five subcommittees have been formed under the apex body of the CCHA. These subcommittees are co-chaired by a representative of the Government and a United Nations agency, and address the following areas:

- (a) Logistics and essential services (co-chairs: CGES and World Food Programme (WFP));
- (b) IDPs: Resettlement and welfare (co-chairs: Ministry of Resettlement and Disaster Relief Services and UNHCR);
- (c) Livelihoods (co-chairs: Ministry of Fisheries and Aquatic Resources and International Labour Organizations);
- (d) Education (co-chairs: Ministry of Education and UNICEF);
- (e) Health (co-chairs: Ministry of Health and WHO).

164. The subcommittees meet regularly, discuss and resolve all operational issues that fall within their respective area, and submit a monthly report to the CCHA indicating policy areas that the CCHA needs to address as well as any issues that cannot be implemented by the respective subcommittee.

165. The CCHA has been instrumental in gaining access and providing humanitarian assistance to IDPs in the north and the east of Sri Lanka. It provides a forum for key decisions to be made and implemented as all relevant stakeholders attend the meeting. Moreover, the subcommittees established under the CCHA allow for broader consultation with specialised agencies.

166. Though the National Coordination Meeting on IDPs and the Consultative Committee on Humanitarian Assistance focus on providing assistance to recently displaced persons; both have been used as a platform to lobby for Tsunami related activities and long-term development projects.

Mode of Operations for all stakeholders involved in humanitarian and development work in Sri Lanka (a subcommittee established under the CCHA)

167. A subcommittee, developed under the CCHA and consisting of government, donor, United Nations and I/NGO representatives was convened in order to agree on and draft the terms of reference [highlighting the scope, and laying the framework] for the development of a Mode of Operations for all stakeholders involved in humanitarian and development work in Sri Lanka. The Mode of Operations is currently being drafted.

Steering group and six subcommittees to draft a new human rights charter for Sri Lanka (Committee and subcommittees appointed under the IMCHR)

168. In accordance with an election pledge made by the President, the Inter-Ministerial Committee on Human Rights appointed an expert committee - representing both Government and civil society - to draft a new constitutional Human Rights Charter for Sri Lanka.

169. The expert committee has held many meetings to deliberate over key human rights protections that should form part of the constitutional framework. In order to draft specific provisions of the Charter, and bring on board more experts, the group created the following six subcommittees:

- (a) Civil and Political Rights;
- (b) Economic, Social, Cultural and Environmental Rights;
- (c) Women, Children and Marginalised/Vulnerable Groups;
- (d) Criminal Justice;
- (e) Group Rights;
- (f) Enforcement.

170. As part of a national process of consultation, to ultimately express the will of the people of Sri Lanka, the Ministries of Disaster Management and Human Rights, and Constitutional Affairs and National Integration have committed to a national consultation process on the draft Charter. Once a draft is finalized, a notice will be published in newspapers in all three languages calling for public representations. Workshops will also be held throughout the country to inform the public about the proposed Charter, and secure a draft which reflects the will, aspirations and vision of the people.

Working Group to study the implementation of the recommendations of the Special Rapporteur on freedom of religion or belief (WG appointed under the IMCHR)

171. The Working Group was set up under the Inter-Ministerial Committee on Human Rights to study the recommendations highlighted in the report of Asma Jahangir, Special Rapporteur on freedom of religion or belief (E/CN.4/2006/5/Add.3). The Working Group has met on a number of occasions and identified specific policy recommendations. It is currently in the final stages of its deliberations and will report its findings/recommendations in the form of a report.

172. Other areas of focus:

- (a) Strengthening the Ministry's partnerships and programmes with the United Nations and other donor agencies, I/NGOs and community-based organizations involved in human rights work and disaster management. This includes drafting of project proposals, MOUs and progress/final reports for collaboration between the Ministry and donors/agencies;
- (b) Conducting substantive research and providing policy guidance advisory service on key areas, including legislative reform - reviewing draft bills, drafting briefings, etc.;
- (c) Coordinating and facilitating collaboration of UNDP with the Ministry on human rights. This includes, facilitating collaboration of UNDP with the Ministry under the umbrella proposal for "strengthening human rights in post-tsunami recovery";

(d) Providing capacity-development to Ministry officials on relevant human rights themes and on human rights based approaches (HRBA) to recovery and development with a view to advancing a more rights-friendly and rights-based approach to the Ministry's work;

(e) Working in collaboration with other government agencies and institutions to identify and give effect to international treaty obligations, including support to working group on treaty body recommendations;

(f) Providing advice on and responding to public complaints and communications from United Nations agencies, I/NGOs, donors and community-based organizations on specific human rights issues;

(g) Providing human rights messaging and communication material for the Minister and Ministry, including public information;

(h) Research and coordination for parliamentary select-committees, namely on man-made disasters, and the forthcoming select committee on: the revision of the act constituting and enabling the HRC; and the constitutional jurisdiction of the Court under Chapter XVI of the Constitution especially the consideration of post-enactment legislative review by the Supreme Court.

173. Apart from continuing with this existing work, in 2008 the Ministry will attempt to devise for the first time an overarching human rights promotion and protection framework for the country for the period 2009 to 2013. This will be done under a programme of assistance currently under discussion with and utilizing the expertise of UNDP and OHCHR. One main objective of the envisaged technical cooperation is the development of a National Action Plan on Human Rights in keeping with the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action of 1993.

174. The National Action Plan (and its process of preparation) is expected to:

(a) Enable the Government to assess Sri Lanka's human rights needs, leading to the development of a broad vision and strategy on the advancement of human rights;

(b) Set realistic goals and targets for the promotion and protection of human rights;

(c) Strengthen the human rights protection system in Sri Lanka by enhancing the capacity of national institutions engaged in human rights-related work to address human rights concerns;

(d) Support and advance sustainable peace in the country by strengthening institutions that enable people to channel their grievances in a non-violent manner and thus reduce the risk of social tension;

(e) Ensure better protection of economic, social and cultural rights which will lead to the concerns of minority and vulnerable groups being addressed;

(f) Improve rule of law, strengthen the administration of justice and strengthen the independence of the judiciary;

(g) Raise awareness - leading to a greater understanding of human rights and their value to individuals and communities (raise awareness amongst government officials, security forces, grass roots civil society organizations and the general public placing a primary focus on duty-bearers);

(h) Mainstream human rights in government planning: policy, programming and process - and ensure conflict sensitive planning;

(i) Increase coordination amongst government ministries and agencies - thereby avoiding duplication of effort and at the same time raising general awareness of the human rights initiatives being supported by different agencies leading to responsive institutions of the state that protect and promote human rights;

(j) Develop tools to plan the management of resources for the promotion and protection of human rights;

(k) Provide the country with a modality for evaluating performance with regard to human rights obligations;

(l) Inform donor agencies and governments of the implementation of projects and create a consolidated and strategic basis for national development frameworks that has human rights at its core leading to improved linkages between human rights and development;

(m) Enable Sri Lanka to better meet its international obligations - treaty implementation and improved frequency of submission of reports to treaty monitoring bodies, leading to an expansion of human rights protection for all Sri Lankans.

4. Ministry of justice and law reforms

175. The Constitution prescribes in article 105 that institutions for the administration of justice which protect and enforce the rights of the people, shall be the Supreme Court, the Court of Appeal, the High Court, and the other courts of first instance, tribunals or such institutions as Parliament may from time to time establish. The Supreme Court and the Court of Appeal are each a superior court of record.

176. Articles 107-117 of the Constitution contain provisions guaranteeing the independence of the judiciary. They provide, inter alia, for the appointment of the Chief Justice, the President of the Court of Appeal and every other judge of the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeal, by the President. Every such judge holds office during “good behaviour” and shall not be removed except by an order of the President, made after an address of Parliament, supported by the majority of the total number of the members of the Parliament, has been presented to the President for such removal on a finding of proved misbehaviour or incapacity.

5. Ministry of Constitutional Affairs and National Integration

177. The Ministry of Constitutional Affairs and National Integration is mandated to implement the Official Languages Policy enshrined in “the Constitution of the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka (Chapter IV).

178. The Ministry has taken the following measures towards the effective implementation of this Policy.

179. Bilingualization of the Public Service, Public Administration Circular Number 3/2007 dated 9 February 2007, provides incentives for Public Officers presently in services to acquire competency in the Second Language.

180. In terms of Public Administrative Circular No 7/2007, dated 28 May 2007, officers joining the Public Service on or after 1st July 2007 are required to acquire the competency in the Second Language within a period of five years from the date of joining the Public Service.

181. The National Institute of Language Education and Training has been established by Act No. 26 of 2007, with the objective of producing:

(a) Competent teachers to teach Sinhala, Tamil and English to those who are desirous of acquiring such knowledge;

(b) Competent translators and interpreters in the Sinhala, Tamil and English languages who shall constitute the National Translators Service and the National Interpreters Service to be established by written law;

(c) Qualified trainers to train language teachers, translators and interpreters in the Sinhala, Tamil and English Languages;

(d) Trained persons with trilingual capabilities for the efficient provision of services to the public.

182. The Ministry during the period 15 September 2007 to 30 October 2007 held Mobile Services in all Divisional Secretariat Divisions in the Eastern Province, (Trincomalee 11, Baticaloa 12 and Ampara 22) in collaboration with other ministries and agencies and provided the following services to the people in Eastern Province. The services provided included the issuance of free national identity cards, birth certificates, marriage and death certificates, free legal advice, identity cards to senior citizens and conducted awareness programmes to the youth on the availability of vocational training and as to the opportunities for youth to engage in development activities.

183. Eighty programmes have been conducted in the year 2007 in all parts of the country to promote ethnic harmony and as a confidence building measure among the different communities. The programmes carried out included youth camps, joint shramadana activities and awareness programmes addressing students, religious leaders and civil society, drawing of posters and pictures promoting peace, etc.

6. Attorney-General's Department

184. The Attorney-General's Department is headed by the Attorney-General who is the Chief Law Officer of the State. The Department functions with a cadre of 199 professionals which includes the Attorney-General, the Solicitor General, 5 Additional Solicitors General, 20

Deputy Solicitors General, 40 Senior State Counsel, and 80 State Counsel, 2 State Attorneys, 5 Senior State Attorneys, 10 Assistant State Attorneys and 1 Accountant. In the year 1884 this office was established by law consequent to a decision of the Supreme Court.

185. The Department continues to perform its traditional role of advising Government and its Institutions and representing Government and its Institutions in litigation. In the performance of its work, the Department operates in distinct branches. These are the civil branch, the criminal branch, the State Attorneys branch, the Supreme Court branch, and the Corporation branch. There are also special units to which specially identified responsibilities have been assigned. These are, the Missing Persons Unit (which handles matters relating to persons who are alleged to have disappeared), Non-Summary Unit (which was set up to expedite non-summary inquiries in Magistrate's Courts), the EER Unit (which handles cases under Emergency Regulations), the Habeas Corpus Unit (which handles cases filed in relation to missing persons) Child Abuse Unit and the Public Petitions Unit (which handles public petitions).

186. The major functions of the Department are:

(a) Institution and defence of civil actions for and on behalf of the Republic, Ministers and Public Officers;

(b) Institution and conduct of criminal proceedings for and on behalf of the Republic;

(c) Examination of Bills for their consistency with the provisions of the Constitution;

(d) Providing on request, legal advice or opinions to State institutions;

(e) Appearance before the Supreme Court in proceedings in the Supreme Court in its exercise of jurisdiction in relation to constitutional, fundamental rights, consultative and breach of parliamentary privilege matters;

(f) Appearance in court and assisting court in respect of disciplinary proceedings against members of the Bar.

7. Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration (Ombudsman)

187. The Constitution of Sri Lanka also provides that Parliament shall by law provide for the establishment of the Office of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration (Ombudsman), charged with the duty of investigating and reporting upon complaints or allegations of the infringement of fundamental rights and other injustices by public officers and officers of public corporations, local authorities and other like institutions, in accordance with and subject to the provisions of such law.

188. The Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration Act No. 17 of 1981 established the Office of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration. Under the provisions of this Act, if the Committee of Parliament set up to consider petitions presented by members of Parliament is of the view that any petition presented to it by a member of Parliament discloses an infringement of a fundamental right or other injustice by a public officer or an officer of a public corporation, local authority or other like institution, it may refer such petition to the Commissioner for investigation and report.

189. Under the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration Act No. 17 of 1981, when a petition is presented by the Public Petitions Committee of Parliament, the Parliamentary Commissioner will investigate the matter and upon the conclusion of the investigation, he will determine whether there has been or there is likely to be an infringement of a fundamental right or other injustice. The Commissioner will then report his determination together with his reasons to the Public Petitions Committee with a recommendation for appropriate relief. The Public Petitions Committee may, after consideration of a report made to it by the Commissioner, report to Parliament its opinion on the action to be taken.

190. Apart from the Constitution itself, there are other mechanisms which supplement the fundamental rights jurisprudence.

8. Human rights directorates in the armed forces and the police

191. A Directorate on Human Rights and Humanitarian Law of the Sri Lanka Army conducts awareness programmes on human rights and humanitarian law for the security personnel. Up to the end of 2007, 95 per cent of Army personnel have received such training. Based on this model, the other armed services have developed training programmes for service personnel, whilst this model, which has widely been deemed successful, has been suggested for police training too. The IMCHR is currently discussing measures to enhance levels of training in cooperation with other state institutions as well as the ICRC. Focal points for this initiative will be the human rights cells in all 3 armed services which report directly to the respective service commanders. Furthermore Civil and Military Liaison Officers (CMLOs) have also been appointed for all conflict-affected areas and the Government is looking into the establishment of a CML Directorate at the central level. A National Committee on International Humanitarian Law has also been established under the chairmanship of the Legal Advisor of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs to examine, inter alia, the necessity for domestic laws to implement international humanitarian law conventions and possible subscription to international humanitarian law conventions. The National Committee has wide participation of relevant line ministries and departments, such as the Ministry of Defence, the armed services, the Attorney-General's Department and the Legal Draftsman's Department, etc. A direct outcome of the work of the National Committee was the framing of legislation to give effect to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 in the form of the Geneva Conventions Act No. 4 of 2006 and Sri Lanka's ratification of the Hague Convention for the Protection of Cultural Property in the Event of Armed Conflict. Representatives of ICRC are also invited to participate in the discussions of the National Committee when required.

192. The Sri Lanka Police Department operates a Human Rights Division which seeks to strengthen the role of the law enforcement authorities in protecting human rights. With this goal the police has embarked on a programme to train staff on intelligence led policing, enhancing capacity building and establishing guiding policies of transparency, development of human rights/humanitarian law and legal processes and policing with the community. A Special Investigation Unit has been established to inquire into and prosecute alleged instances of torture. Women's and Children's Desks have been opened in almost all Police Stations in the country. These Desks are opened throughout the day, under the charge of a female officer and are expected to provide speedy redress to victims.

D. Education programmes and public information

1. Sri Lanka Foundation

193. The Sri Lanka Foundation was established by statute by the Government with the aim and object of protecting human rights, promotion of international understanding and cooperation and universal respect for the observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction.

194. The Human Rights Centre of the Foundation is directly involved in human rights education and dissemination of information. The Centre as early as 1983 together with the National Institute of Education introduced human rights concepts into the school curriculum. International agreements and covenants form part of the reference material. In addition to the formal education programme the Centre has also undertaken to introduce the World Council for Curriculum and Instruction Project on human rights to a number of selected schools in Sri Lanka. The programme envisages the improvement of awareness of human rights among schoolchildren.

195. The “Social justice through legal literacy” programme of the Centre holds seminars for adults - peasants, workers, women’s groups and local council members - on the law and its procedures concerning problems encountered by these groups in their daily life. The Centre has also from time to time conducted seminars of the armed forces on the need to adhere to human rights norms.

196. In commemoration of the World Conference on Human Rights in Vienna in 1993, the Centre published a compilation of United Nations instruments on human rights in all these languages. This collection will serve as a valuable guide to which easy reference could be made. A project to promote human rights through the electronic media is also under way.

197. Apart from the efforts of the State, a number of NGOs are involved in promoting awareness among the public and relevant authorities of international human rights norms. A half page is devoted to raising awareness on human rights in the Daily News, a leading newspaper, free of charge.

2. United Nations Information Centre (UNIC)

198. The United Nations Information Centre in Sri Lanka serves as a focal point in the dissemination of United Nations-related information. Its responsibilities include maintaining a close relationship with the Government, Ministries, research institutions and officials and responding to the different needs for information on the United Nations. The UNIC also assists the press and broadcasting media in producing news about the United Nations. It also works closely with the education system providing supplementary material to help in teaching about the United Nations system. It also organizes seminars and workshops for master teachers and students. Its reference library is a source of United Nations official documents and is open to the public and researchers.

3. United Nations Association of Sri Lanka

199. The United Nations Association of Sri Lanka has published Sinhala and Tamil versions of the Charter of the United Nations which is now being circulated to all public libraries and high school libraries, universities and libraries of institutions.

4. International Committee of the Red Cross in Sri Lanka

200. The International Committee of the Red Cross in Sri Lanka conducts lectures and seminars for the armed forces on international humanitarian law and the law of war.

5. Centre for the Study of Human Rights

201. The Centre for the Study of Human Rights of the University of Colombo, which has been in operation since October 1991, works closely with local and international NGOs and educational institutions to design and facilitate human rights education and research. The Centre is in the process of translating important human rights documents into Sinhala and Tamil as most of the literature is only available in English. The pilot project on human rights education for the armed forces and police undertaken by the Centre hopes to further sensitize service personnel to human rights issues. The Centre initiated a Human Rights Outreach Education Project for the community which promotes human rights awareness in a manner which integrates human rights into the thinking process of the participants. The current programmes are given in their Annual Report 2006 and in the website: www.cshr.org.

6. Human Rights Commission of Sri Lanka

202. The Human Rights Commission has undertaken the following activities.

Raising human rights awareness among public officials and other professionals

203. The series of continuous programmes are being conducted to create awareness among law enforcement officers and detention centres. There is a “hot line” operative for 24 hours to handle cases of allegations on violations of human rights.

Promotion of human rights awareness through educational programmes and Government-sponsored public information

204. A series of training programmes are being carried out all over the country. In addition Research Programmes have been undertaken on topics of importance to the well being of the society. Police Officers, Prison Officers, Senior School Children and Principals and Teachers of Schools are given education on Human Rights. These programmes have increased the intake of petitions over and above 100 per day. Public Hearings on economic and social issues are being conducted.

Promotion of human rights awareness through the mass media

205. The Commission participates at the discussions sponsored by TV and Radio. Short films have been displayed on Women’s and Children’s Rights. TV spots have been developed. There is a difficulty in obtaining prime time for such spots and assistance of the Government media is looked for.

7. International observers

206. Sri Lanka has also afforded many opportunities to United Nations special procedure mechanisms and international human rights organizations to visit Sri Lanka in order to evaluate and make implementable recommendations on the observance of human rights in the country. The International Committee of the Red Cross has been afforded facilities to operate in the north and east and in other areas stricken by the conflict. Sri Lanka has also regularly afforded parliamentary teams from the Commonwealth, the European Union and other organizations the opportunity of monitoring the conduct of presidential, parliamentary and local government elections.

8. All Party Representative Committee (APRC)

Seeking a political and peaceful settlement of conflict

207. The Government of Sri Lanka has taken a number of initiatives to facilitate the realization of a negotiated settlement to resolve the national problem. Significant among them is the endeavour to develop constitutional proposals with broad support. The main aim has been to find an indigenous solution to end decades of internal strife, and enable all people to live in dignity and peace in Sri Lanka.

208. President Mahinda Rajapaksa has emphasized the fact that the task of finding a political solution to the national question requires a multi-party effort and an inclusive approach. President Rajapaksa invited representatives of 15 political parties on 19 January 2006 at the Presidential Secretariat in an All Party Conference on the peace process. The President in explaining the objectives of the deliberation emphasized the importance of developing a consensus among political parties represented in Parliament with a view to commencing peace talks.

209. Unity through discussion was apparent in the first report of the All Party Representatives Committee (APRC) which was presented to President Rajapaksa on 23 January 2008. The report, entitled "Action to be taken by the President to fully implement relevant provisions of the present constitution as a prelude to the APRC proposals", was signed by representatives of all but one of the 14 parties that constitute the APRC. The fourteenth member, the representative of the Western Peoples Front has confirmed the party will remain in the APRC and participate in the final stages of the deliberations which will lead to the APRC proposals for the long term.

210. The first of the measures recommended is to recognize the shortcomings in the implementation of subjects and functions devolved on the Provinces through the Concurrent List and to endeavour to implement the Thirteenth Amendment to the Constitution in order to overcome the existing shortcomings, secondly the recommendation of immediate elections for the provincial Council in the Eastern Province, thirdly, the recommendation of an alternative arrangement for the people in the Northern Province of the island to enjoy the fruits of devolution through an Interim Council which will aid and advise the Governor, fourthly, the full implementation of Chapter IV of the Constitution on language.

211. Though a wide divergence of views were prevalent at the initial meetings, after lengthy negotiations in which various viewpoints were put forward, and listened to with respect, the APRC has achieved a level of consensus not seen before in political discussion. The possibility of achieving the goal of a political solution to the national question is enhanced through this process.

212. The President in accepting to fully implement the relevant provisions of the Thirteenth Amendment and in presenting the APRC document to the Cabinet requested full cooperation to implement it urgently. This makes clear the current political will, missing in successive Governments since 1987, to make a success of the Thirteenth amendment which should, had it not been for the initial intransigence of the LTTE, laid the foundation for settling the problems that had arisen.

213. The APRC and its chairman have strived to actively seek within a united country, ways of meeting the aspirations of the Tamil speaking people, in particular in the North and East of the country. These people suffered worst from the failure to take their interests into account in national decision making, though it is also true that people in all areas outside decision making centres did not have their interests adequately considered in many instances. Stress laid in the report on satisfactory implementation of constitutional provisions regarding language rights indicates the importance of ensuring that all citizens feel they are adequately empowered in the context of a united country.

214. APRC members were unanimous in opting to continue their deliberations soon after they presented their first report to the President on the 23 January 2008. They met on 28 January as scheduled for the 64th meeting and pledged to work together in the same spirit of cooperation and to continue with the process of confidence building which had enabled them to overcome mutual distrust and reach consensus on many issues under discussion. This is in keeping with their aim to finalize the set of proposals that would be the basis for a new Constitution and provide a final solution to the National question. It is important to note in this connection that for the first time, proposals have emerged from within a multiparty consultative process.

9. Civil society

215. There are many NGOs working on human rights related work, however very few are registered. According to the Human Rights Commission, there is no bar for any organization to report on any violation and they are entertained, investigated and recommendations made. The Ministry of Disaster Management and Human Rights has several working committees where NGOs are represented and active.

10. Budget allocation and assistance

216. Ministry of Disaster Management and Human Rights has advised that given the relative paucity of public funding for human rights promotion and protection, there is a need to buttress funds and local capacities through technical cooperation and capacity building including making requests for such assistance from bilateral and multilateral sources.

217. The Human Rights Commission comments on their budget that the Government meets about 40 per cent of expenditure and 60 per cent received from the donor agencies. Donor agencies such as UNDP have signed agreements of cooperation. However the funds are forthcoming on piecemeal basis and follow a procedure of reimbursement, which has caused some inconvenience in initiating programmes and for their continuity.

11. Reporting process at the national level

218. With regard to national reporting in respect of treaty bodies, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs coordinates action with the Ministries of Justice and Disaster Management and Human Rights. The consultation process for such reporting will also include concerned line Ministries, national institutions, academia and civil society organizations. A treaty body reporting working group is currently engaged in finalizing Sri Lanka's periodic reports under the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families and the Optional Protocol to Convention on the Rights of the Child on the involvement of children in armed conflict.

Follow-up to concluding observations of human rights treaty bodies

219. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs usually summons a meeting of all relevant stakeholders as a first step to follow up on the concluding observations of human rights treaty bodies. In addition, key issues are also taken up at the Inter-Ministerial Committee on Human Rights chaired by the Minister of Disaster Management and Human Rights, which is a regular standing body, at which any issue could be raised. The Ministry of Disaster Management and Human Rights also has an Advisory Committee including several civil society leaders who may also bring up any key issue with regard to the concluding observations of human rights treaty bodies.

220. At the request of the Government, the OHCHR conducted a workshop on this subject in Colombo from 26 -28 April 2005, which was welcomed by all participants.

III. INFORMATION ON NON-DISCRIMINATION AND EQUALITY AND EFFECTIVE REMEDIES

221. Sri Lanka has signed the following treaties and conventions having a bearing on the Principle of non discrimination:

- (a) Universal Declaration of Human Rights;
- (b) International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights;
- (c) International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights;
- (d) International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination;
- (e) ILO Convention No. 100 (1951) concerning Equal Remuneration for Men and Women Workers for Work of Equal Value;
- (f) ILO Convention No. 111 (1958) concerning Discrimination in Respect of Employment and Occupation.

222. The right not to be discriminated is enshrined in the Constitution as a fundamental right.

Article 12

(a) All persons are equal before the law and are entitled to the equal protection of the law.

(b) No citizen shall be discriminated against on the grounds of race, religion, language, caste, sex, political opinion, place of birth or any such grounds:

“Provided that it shall be lawful to require a person to acquire within a reasonable time sufficient knowledge of any language as a qualification for any employment or office in the Public, Judicial or Local Government Service or in the service of any public corporation, where such knowledge is reasonably necessary for the discharge of the duties of such employment or office.

Provided further that it shall be lawful to require a person to have sufficient knowledge of any language as a qualification for any such employment of office where no function of that employment or office can be discharged otherwise than with knowledge of that language.”

(c) No person shall, on the grounds of race, religion, language, caste, sex or any one such ground, be subject to any disability, liability, restriction or condition with regard to access to shops, public restaurants, hotels, places of public entertainment and places of public worship of his own religion.

(d) Nothing in this Article shall prevent special provision being made, by law, subordinate legislation or executive action, for the advancement of women, children or disabled persons.

223. The Supreme Court is vested with sole and exclusive jurisdiction under article 126, paragraph 1 of the Constitution to hear and determine any question relating to the infringement or imminent infringement by executive or administrative action of any fundamental right recognized under the Constitution.

224. Under article 126, paragraph 4, the Supreme Court has the power to grant relief or make directions in a just and equitable manner when its jurisdiction is invoked.

225. In addition to the Constitution vesting in the highest Court, namely the Supreme Court jurisdiction pertaining to allegations of violations of fundamental rights including the right not to be discriminated, the following institutions are also vested with statutory power to deal with allegations of such violations:

- (a) The National Human Rights Commission;
- (b) The Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration (Ombudsman);
- (c) The National Police Commission (deals with complaints against Police officers).

226. In addition to the above, constitutional and statutory mechanisms, administratively the Government of Sri Lanka has also set up an Inter-Ministerial Committee on Human Rights and an Inter-Ministerial Working Group on Human Rights to monitor the human rights situation in the country. A Human Rights Ministry has been set up to ensure that the Constitutional obligation on all organs of Government to respect, secure, and advance Fundamental Rights is carried out. Under the said Ministry an Advisory Committee has been established which consists of several representatives of civil society. The Advisory Committee can give advice to the Government of Sri Lanka on any issue relating to human rights.

227. The above clearly demonstrates that the Government of Sri Lanka has taken steps to give Constitutional recognition to the right of non-discrimination and equality. Further, it has entrusted the highest court with jurisdiction to make determinations in this regard. In addition, various statutory as well as administrative bodies have been established to ensure that those who are aggrieved by alleged violations of discrimination or inequality have been provided with an effective remedy within the domestic framework.

228. Please also see at Annex IV an analysis of conformity of Sri Lankan law with key international instruments on human rights and labour rights of which Sri Lanka is a State Party. Each initial report submitted by Sri Lanka under the different international instruments also contains a detailed article by article review of such conformity.
